Interest Reported Great in Pacific International Exposition

With preliminary financing climbing far beyond even the most optimistic expectations, San Diego's 1935 Exposition juggernaut plunged ahead with unprecedented speed to prepare for the opening of the California-Pacific International Exposition on May 29.

Backed by civic unanimity evidenced in the over-subscription of the $500,000 campaign for funds to the extent of nearly $200,000, the executive management of the coming spectacle sent hundreds of men to work in Balboa park to prepare the grounds and buildings for the countless exhibits which will comprise the Exposition.

The entire grounds of the Exposition have been mapped, interior work in the present magnificent buildings is near completion, the nucleus of the organization which will prepare the enterprise has been formed. Branch offices have been opened in the Arcade of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce building and in Chicago.

In both cities, representatives of the Exposition are already allotting exhibition space. That many of the exhibitions at "A Century of Progress" in Chicago may be transported to San Diego was regarded as a virtual certainty following the recent visit here of P. M. Massmann, executive officer of the World's Fair. Following a survey of the 1,400 acres of Balboa park, and conferences with the Exposition management, Massmann said he had "no doubt that many of Chicago's exhibitors will move their displays to this beautiful western city."

The California-Pacific International Exposition—California's invitation, through San Diego, to the world—will attract to the Southwestern gateway of the nation upwards of 5,000,000 visitors, Exposition officials predict.

To reach this vast attendance of peoples from all parts of the world, prospective exhibitors have indicated they would present displays the like of which have never been seen in the United States.

All phases of life will be represented in the countless displays. Science will be depicted in all its mysterious forms; industry and commerce are calling upon the genius of all men to present graphic exhibits; art, history, beauty, education will be emphasized. The list is endless. Underlying the entire pageant of progress will be the central theme of beauty and animation, with exhibitors not only attempting to show what is done, but how.

In the "Villages of the World" will be brought together a cosmopolitan gathering of all peoples of the globe, with many nations contributing examples of their mode of life, their products, customs and abodes. More than 15 foreign flags are expected to be represented in the foreign village, undoubtedly one of the most colorful and entertaining in the spectacle.

M. E. CHURCH SERVICES

"Reflection or Refraction" will be the topic of the sermon to be preached by the Rev. James Hughes, Sunday morning at the Methodist church, corner of Saratoga and Sunset Cliffs Blvd. A male quartet composed of Rev. Hughes, Rev. Insko, George Sharpe, and Dr. Parks will sing. The choir will sing an anthem. The Sunday school meets at 9:45 with classes for all ages in religious education.

Epworth League at 7 o'clock in the evening. A meeting for young people. Roldness Reider will lead the meeting.

The Rev. James Hughes of the Ocean Beach Methodist church, has been selected as one of the teachers in the School of Religions Education, conducted under the auspices of the International Council of Religious Education, and held at the Park Boulevard Methodist church each Tuesday night for the next ten weeks.

OCEAN BEACH WOMAN'S CLUB EVENTS

Members of the crafts and industries department of Ocean Beach Woman's club will meet with Mrs. J. Oliver 4763 Coronado avenue for a pot luck dinner, October 5.

This will be the last opportunity to remind members and their friends of the rummage sale to be held October 5th and 6th, at 1819 Logan Ave., in San Diego. Anything of value you have to offer. Please help to make this sale a success by calling Mrs. Kenline, BV 1448-J. Mrs. Palmer BV 0972-J. or Mrs. Hayward BV 0706-W.

The Ocean Beach Woman's club will entertain their members and friends at the club house in Bonita, 1 mile east of Glen Abby, Wednesday October 3, from 2 to 4. There will be bridge and 500, table prizes and refreshments. For transportation call Mrs. Dumont BV 0944-J. Those who go in their own cars should leave here by 1 p. m.

local project, but national and international was emphasized again this week when Herbert Hoover, the only living former president of the United States, became honorary vice president and Governor Frank F. Merriam accepted an honorary presidency of the Exposition. At the same time President Abelardo L. Rodriguez, President-elect Lazaro Cardenas and former President Pascual Ortiz Rubio of Mexico became honorary vice presidents.

MUSINGS WHILE MEANDERING

(By Merrill Stuart)

Glimpses through windows as shadows lengthen and eventide lamps are lighted:

A great embrasure, high, wide and shining; far-flung velvet draperies; flickering firelight beckoning to passer-by—as though to share the comfort and luxury within.

Half-drawn shades; waiting supper table beneath bright chandelier; door opens, daddy home, laughing children; mother's pleasure in her kitchen. No joy is really ever joy unless shared, is it?

High forbidding casements, closed, locked and secretive. What's behind them? Since every man's house is his castle, none may know. Open dormer; thin curtains swaying gently; young mother crooning softly as she rocks cradle; living fully and much needed is she.

Bow-window; bright flowers, potted plants; brilliant parrot within gilded cage; beyond French doors a patio; science of sweet growing things, fragrance, color.

Stately silken lamps aslant an oriel; sense of companionship in library's book-lined walls; quiet study and meditation.

Sky-light—perhaps an artist feverishly imprisoning landscape's fading lines..... Vine-covered lattice—youthful girl smiling thru..... At a dim casement, woman standing alone—brooding upon loneliness—

Uncompromising windows with sternly-drawn shades; no beam of cheer; is it fear of marauders, or some austere soul within as dark and heavy as the shades?..... Glassed-in porch; glowing lamp beside great chair where grandfather reads aloud; grandmother knitting silently beside him.

Candlelight, tea tables; sociability, gaiety of bridge party just breaking up..... Dull and dingy rays from kerosene lamp upon kitchen table; lonely old man eating solitary supper; was it for this he built all the years gone?

Bare room with garish unshaded bulbs; realities of stark existence; no softening lines; shrill radio's blatant blaring, drowning twilight's sweet melody.

Young couple quarreling; perhaps a bride in her first year's housekeeping, with its misunderstandings..... Restaurant's wide portals—where eat those without homes..... Apartment's fitful lighting—on and off; its occupants staying but a short while..... A peep within church windows; good women serving good food at church supper; religion meeting man's common need.

Bleached and abandoned house, boarded darkly; desolation; death has passed mayhap..... In an attic square, a single light throws its beams far over the sea—a vigil for those who come no more.

And so on and on. Behind windows, beyond portals—life's most vivid experiences are lived. Happiness, despair; out-worn age and thwarted hopes; youth's ambitions; sickness, health and death.

Glimpses into hearts of homes. Homes are man's heritage, stamped with his own personality; his well-being made or marred by the environments he has created.

Musing thus, the passer-by meanders slowly homeward as darkness falls.

There's a sweet little book just out—"The Stray Child" by Robert Royce. An hour's pleasure for both children and grown-ups, Three kittens on way home from school find a lost child. They take him home, and the story goes on to tell how they petted, cared for and loved him. Reversing usual order of things, you see; but isn't that original idea just too cute for anything? Kindness of animals; kindness to animals. It works both ways.

O. W. Afterbaugh was over Tuesday from Imperial valley and returned home the same day accompanied by Mrs. Afterbaugh who has enjoyed four and one-half months here at 5022½ Niagara avenue.

Homecoming Game at Point Loma High

Point Loma High school is urging every loyal alumnus and friend to come back to the old school next Friday afternoon at 2:30 to witness the dedication of the athletic field to her beloved Principal Emeritus, Pete W. Ross. The occasion will be the opening league game of the season and will be played with Oceanside.

Between halves an impressive ceremony will take place and representatives of the Board of Education School Administration and Student Body will pay tribute to their old friend and former principal. The San Diego Board of Education has been asked to name the Point Loma Athletic field officially as "Ross Field" as a permanent memorial to Mr. Ross. At some future date, when permanent bleachers are provided for Ross Field, a bronze plaque will be placed in the masonry as a perpetual tribute to Mr. Ross.

Tickets for the game will be the same for alumni and adults as for students—twenty-five cents each. A large turnout of friends of Point Loma High school and of Pete Ross is confidently expected. It is hoped that one game each year will be a rallying point for alumni of Point Loma and that this homecoming celebration may become an annual event, with Pete Ross as honored guest.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Mrs. C. Soper, superintendent of the Bible school, announces this next Sunday as rally day for the school, and urges the parents to visit with them at 9:45 a. m.

The morning hour of worship is at 11 a. m. and the pastor will speak on the subject "The Chief Shepherd". At 6:30 p. m. the Young People's society will be led by Walter Dunn. The topic for discussion in "Goodwill."

The closing service of the day is at 7:30 p. m. After a brief song service the pastor will preach on the subject "The Rightness of Righteousness."

You will receive a cordial welcome at the services of this church.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"Reality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from Philippians: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

The words of David, from II Samuel, are among the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon. "As for God, his way is perfect; the word of the Lord is tried: he is a buckler to all them that trust in him." The words of Jesus, from Matthew, are included also, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

A correlative passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states, "When we learn in Science how to be perfect even as our Father in heaven is perfect, thought is turned into new and healthy channels,—towards the contemplation of things immortal and away from materiality to the Principle of the universe, including harmonious man."

GRAND JURY TOO INDEFINITE COUNCILMEN WIN POINT

Grand jury misconduct accusations against four city councilmen were virtually quashed Tuesday when Judge Charles C. Haines upheld demurrers which contended that the accusations did not constitute charges of a public offense or constitute proper grounds for action. The councilmen are Charles E. Anderson, Albert W. Bennett, Will H. Cameron and Alva S. Davis. Judge Haines ruled that the accusations may be amended within 15 days "by the proper parties."

From a Beachside Window.

Books, binoculars and a vase
Of blossoms on a table pose
Beside a window through which glows
A flaming sunset's florid face
Above a surf-flung, swaying sea
Superb in stern immensity.

Crimson, purple, gold and rose,
Mauve and silver, and the blue
Of pensive skies, come drifting through
The undulating tide that flows
Its even pulses in and out
On Time's interminable route.

So shows the day's-end through the glass—
A glamorous, iridescent hour
That dull, drab dusk soon will defleur,
Itself again to swiftly pass
As Night, dark empress of the sky,
In jeweled robes goes sweeping by.

Ocean Beach School Settling Down to Work

Weil-established in their classes despite the confusion of the construction of the new building, the boys and girls of the Ocean Beach school are under way in their semester's work.

The L1, under Miss Steddom, is beginning work on home-made motion pictures of scenes drawn by the children.

The H1 under Mrs. Karl, are busily engaged in building a real little grocery store.

The L2 with Miss Turrentine, are studying "community helpers" and will soon visit the fire department.

The H4-L5 grade under Miss Engel is planning to build an Egyptian village in connection with their activity. Some of the children of this grade made a trip to a San Diego bakery on Tuesday afternoon. It proved most interesting to the children as many of them had never seen bakery foods in the making.

The children in Mr. Wilson's room have organized a hobby club which meets after school. Since they do not all have the same interests, the boys and girls have grouped themselves into individual groups within this club. Some of the groups are archery, camera, mineralogy and stamp collecting. Their activities will include such things as hiking, taking pictures, making collections of articles pertaining to their hobby, etc. We expect to hear more from this organization in the future.

The L6 grade in Miss Shea's room went to the Fine Art Gallery in Balboa park on Wednesday morning. They saw an exhibit of bronze sculptures, replicas of the original life size models in the Field Museum, Chicago. Mrs. Masters, Mrs. White, Mrs. Gray, Mr. Barbour and Mr. Chappelle assisted with transportation.

Joyce McCall, L6, has returned to her former home in Iowa.

Shelby Boles, who has been visiting in Arizona, enrolled in the L6 grade Monday.

MORE THAN 1,000 ATTEND CUDAHY PICNIC HERE

Sunday was a gala day for the employees of the Cudahy Packing Co., when they joined in a combined picnic at the Ocean Beach Women's club and Tich's Tavern. Between 1000 and 1500 people attended the affair which was reported as highly successful and enjoyed by all who were there.

George Friel, 2257 Bolinas street, Ocean Beach, a foreman at the Cudahy Old Town plant, was active in seeing that all employees and guests were well supplied with the plentiful eats and refreshments.

INVITATIONS ISSUED FOR OCTOBER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cole of 4557 Brighton avenue issued invitations during the past week for the wedding October 19, 1934, of their daughter Miss Lois Eleanor to Mr. Garrett F. Middaugh, the ceremony to take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Lee, 4410 Santa Monica avenue, at eight o'clock in the evening.

August Shows Increase Number Employed

The general level of prices received by farmers in California for 24 products of the state during August showed a gain of 19.4 percent over August of last year and a gain of 30.2 percent over August, 1932, according to Bank of America's business review released Monday. It is pointed out that the recent steady gains in certain farm products reflect the heavy reduction in supplies of crops and live stock products in the drought areas of the country.

Farmers in the ten far-western states up to September 1, received $6,996,000 in payment of cattle bought by the government for relief purposes.

As an index of returning business activity, the bank's business review points to the increase in bank debits. Twenty-seven cities throughout the Twelfth Federal Reserve district reported bank debits totaling more than two billion dollars during August. This is a gain of 12.9 percent over the same month of last year and 16.2 percent gain over August, 1932.

The aggregate dollar volume of retail sales of 89 reporting establishments in the eight farwestern states for the month of August increased five percent over the sales of August of last year. Sixty of the 89 retail stores reported gains in volume of sales over August of a year ago.

"The month of August was the eighth consecutive month, in 1934," says the business review, "in which the manufacturing industries of California showed gains in both numbers employed and pay rolls over the corresponding period of 1933. The largest gain in employment during August compared with last year was registered in the food, beverages and tobacco industrial group, with approximately 28 percent more men at work than one year ago."

LINER MORRO CASTLE BURNS AND 150 PERISH—PROGRESS OF THE TEXTILE STRIKE.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

DEATH in horrid form came to about 150 men, women and children when the Ward liner Morro Castle was swept by fire eight miles off the New Jersey coast during a storm. So swiftly did the flames spread and so rough was the sea that ships and coast guard vessels speeding to the rescue could do little but pick up the survivors who escaped in lifeboats and a few who had leaped overboard with life belts. It was one of the worst marine disasters of recent years and its cause was a mystery that the official inquiry sought to solve.

The Morro Castle, large, swift, and luxurious in its appointments, was returning from a seven-day cruise to Havana. Her master, Capt. Robert Wilmott, had died of heart disease only a few hours before the tragedy, and William F. Warms, chief officer, was in command. With 12 other officers and members of the crew he stood by the blazing ship until the hulk was towed to Asbury Park and beached. These 13 men were the heroes of the disaster. George W. Rogers, chief radio operator, staid in the radio room until he was seriously affected by the heat and smoke. He was able to send out only one call for help before his apparatus was disabled.

When the ship sailed from Havana she carried 318 passengers, 230 crew and 10 officers. The survivors included 221 passengers, 171 of the crew, and the nine officers who were left after Captain Wilmott died.

Officers of the ship testified at the inquiry that they believed the fire was of incendiary origin and was fed by gasoline or chemicals, but they could suggest no motive for such a horrible crime. Acting Captain Warms said he based his opinion that the blaze was incendiary on two facts: First, because on August 27, on a previous voyage to Havana, there was a suspicious blaze in the No. 5 hold; second, because reports to him indicated that the writing room locker, in which the fatal fire started, exploded. The flames, he explained further, acted "like gasoline or kerosene," and fire extinguishers had no effect on them.

The chief of the secret police in Havana declares the burning of the Morro Castle was an act of sabotage by members of a secret international maritime association that takes its orders from the Communists of Moscow.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT took a hand in the textile strike by appointing a board of inquiry. The members he named are Gov. John G. Wigant of New Hampshire, Marion Smith of Atlanta, Ga., and Raymond V. Ingersoll, borough president of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Smith is an attorney and the son of the late Senator Hoke Smith. This board was appointed on the recommendation of the national labor relations board and its duties were thus outlined:

1. To inquire into the general character and extent of the complaints of workers in the cotton textile, wool, rayon, silk and allied industries.
2. Inquire into problems confronting the employers in said industries.
3. Consider ways and means of meeting said problems and complaints.
4. Exercise in connection with said industries powers authorized to be conferred by the first section of public resolution 44.
5. On request of the parties to labor dispute, act as a board of voluntary arbitration or select a person or agency for voluntary arbitration.

The President directed that the board should report to him, through the secretary of labor, not later than October 1.

Strike Leader Gorman announced the strikers would accept arbitration of the dispute and agree in advance to abide by the decision of the board, provided the employers made the same agreement immediately. However, he insisted that the mills must remain closed pending the arbitration. On the behalf of the employers it was said these proposals were utterly impossible of acceptance. Renewal of bloody fighting was expected unless a truce could be arranged.

Starting immediately after Labor day, the strike spread rapidly and within a short time about 336,000 workers had quit their jobs. This would indicate the walkout was approximately 50 per cent effective over the entire cotton, woolen and silk industry, which normally employs in the neighborhood of 650,000 workers.

Leaders of the strike claimed that 450,000 had quit at that time and that more were joining the walkout daily. Predictions of violence were fulfilled, for there were bloody riots around the mills in New England, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, and several deaths resulted. In the southern states the National Guard was mobilized.

GEORGE A. SLOAN, president of Cotton Textile Institute, who at first claimed that two-thirds of the workers had refused to join the strike, later admitted that he was wrong and said: "This thing is getting worse by the hour." He added that the reports he had received showed that additional mills were closing, and added:

"I am deeply distressed to learn that blood has been shed in Georgia. These sad events make it plain that the forces unleashed by the strike leaders are now out of their control.

"This is no longer to be viewed as the ordinary industrial warfare which the term 'strike' implies in America. It is not a matter of leaving work and of peaceful picketing.

"The strike call was an appeal for confidence. The appeal was denied by a vast majority of our workers.

"Now lawless bands of misled people, thousands in number, move across wide areas, against whole communities, smash mill doors, drag men and women from work they wish to perform, and threaten with violence all who do not yield. This is an assault on fundamental American rights."

Frank Schweitzer, general secretary of the American Federation of Silk Workers, announced that with the walkout of 17,000 silk workers in the Paterson (N. J.) district and with mills closing in other sections, the silk industry was approximately 80 per cent shut down. Schweitzer disclosed that many unions in other industries, notably the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, were offering material aid to the strikers and supplying organizers.

IN the fifth installment of the senate banking committee on its stock market investigation internal revenue agents were charged with "laxity in enforcement" for accepting, without examination, income tax returns prepared by J. P. Morgan & Co.

The committee presented a long review of evidence that officials of the Morgan company, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the National City bank of New York "avoided" income taxes by "a variety of methods."

"Many returns, particularly of partners in large banking houses, were exempted from adequate scrutiny," the committee said.

"When examinations were made the time devoted to them was comparatively short, in view of the wealth of the taxpayers and the complex nature of their transactions."

"Thus, in 1930, according to the bureau's own records, one day was spent in checking the partnership return of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Drexel & Co.—the most powerful banking group in the world.

"This return was not subjected to any field examination and apparently the agent's explanation was sufficient to satisfy the internal revenue bureau that none was necessary."

Citing that since the hearings were held congress has enacted certain reforms in legislation and administration to prevent tax avoidance, the report stated:

"The need for reform, either in law or its method of enforcement, or both, was made abundantly clear when the income tax returns of some of the leaders of American finance for the years since 1929 were examined by the subcommittee.

"For the year 1929 the partners of J. P. Morgan & Co. collectively paid about $11,000,000 in taxes to the federal government. For the year 1930, 17 Morgan partners, including J. P. Morgan, paid no tax, and five paid aggregate taxes of about $56,000. For the year 1931 not a single Morgan partner paid any tax. For the year 1932 not a single Morgan partner paid any tax.

"For the year 1929 the partners of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. collectively paid about $1,500,000 in taxes. For the year 1930 four Kuhn-Loeb partners, including Otto H. Kahn, paid no tax, and four paid aggregate taxes of about $100,000. For the year 1931 six Kuhn-Loeb partners paid no tax, and the other paid taxes totaling less than $2,000. A similar situation prevailed in 1932."

Charles E. Mitchell, at the time chairman of the National City bank, the report said, "sold his wife in 1929 18,300 shares of National City bank stock at a loss of $2,872,305." This transaction, Mr. Mitchell admitted, was entered for the express purpose of establishing a loss for income tax purposes.

NEW DEALERS rejoiced in the results of the Maine election, though their victory was incomplete. Gov. Louis J. Brann, Democrat, was re-elected by a substantial majority over the Republican candidate, Alfred K. Ames, a wealthy and aged retired lumberman. Senator Frederick Hale, veteran Republican, was returned to the upper house for his fourth term, but his majority over F. Harold Dubord, dynamic Democratic nominee, was so slender that Hale must have felt rather humiliated. The New Dealers, on the face of incomplete returns, won two of the three congressional seats.

Maine was the pioneer prohibition state, but in this election it abandoned its 50-year-old policy and joined the wet list, voting for repeal by a large majority.

WHEN the League of Nations met in Geneva an invitation to Russia to join the league was circulated, signed and sent to Moscow. The council then announced that an accord had been reached to grant Russia a permanent seat on the council, and it was expected that only Portugal and Argentina would continue to oppose this.

Richard Sandler of Sweden was elected president of the league assembly by an almost unanimous vote.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by the NRA of the appointment of a general code authority to administer the basic code authorized two months ago by General Johnson to cover 262 industries that did not have specific codes.

Coincidentally it was announced that only 30 of the industries which were expected to agree to labor provisions for their trades and to other rules and regulations have indicated a desire to come under the "cleanup" code and that but two have already done so.

Chairman of the new authority is Dr. Willard Hotchkiss, president of the Armour Institute of Technology of Chicago. Three other members are De Lancey Kountze, member of the industrial advisory board of NRA and chairman of the board of DeVoe & Reynolds company, paint and varnish manufacturers; Rev. Francis J. Haas, member of the labor advisory board of NRA, and Stacey Macy, member of the NRA consumers' advisory board, assistant director of the Rockefeller foundation, and a former instructor at Amherst and the University of Chicago.

Additional members are to be appointed by the administrator for each industry under the basic code.

IF YOU can believe the foreign office in Tokio, Japan is ready to scrap all powerful weapons of offense and is likely to propose, at the forthcoming naval reduction conference, the abolition of battleships and plane carriers.

"It is not Japan's intention to enter a naval competition which will result in an increase in armaments and heavier burdens for the people of the world," the foreign office spokesman said. "Our plan is to have a navy insufficient for offensive purposes but sufficient for defense. We hope others also will work towards this end."

The foreign office also expressed surprise at Italy's assertion that Japanese penetration of Abyssinia was responsible for the sending of large numbers of Italian troops to Italian Somaliland and Eritrea.

REICHSFUHRER HITLER of Germany renewed his warfare on Jews and also declared all other elements opposing his regime must be suppressed. The chancellor, addressing the annual convention of the Nazi party in Nuremberg, made a slashing attack against "Jewish influence" on German life. He was cheered frequently during his impassioned address, clarifying again his anti-Jewish, Pan-German philosophy of political and social science as the essence of his national-socialistic doctrines for ruling Germanic races.

Hitler also assured the storm troops that they were in no danger of being demobilized, and in another address ordered German women to avoid politics, stay at home, and attend to their husbands and children.

AFTER Upton Sinclair, ex-Socialist who obtained the Democratic nomination for governor of California, had called on President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, he jubilantly asserted that his plan to "End Poverty in California" was identical with the New Deal. Then he went to Washington and sought the support of administration leaders for his campaign. Mr. Roosevelt had said nothing publicly concerning Mr. Sinclair, but Senator

James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, made some pungent comments about the California nominations.

"There has been no California Democratic nomination for governor," Senator Lewis said. "The nomination was made by Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, Kansas and Nebraska Republicans who had moved to southern California. It was Republicans from these states who nominated Mr. Sinclair, not the Democrats nor the Republicans of California. This gentleman's nomination can be charged to that class of Republicans in Los Angeles as a general protest against conditions."

"Senator Johnson came out for the whole of the Roosevelt policies, and was nominated by all parties. We rank him as a Democrat."

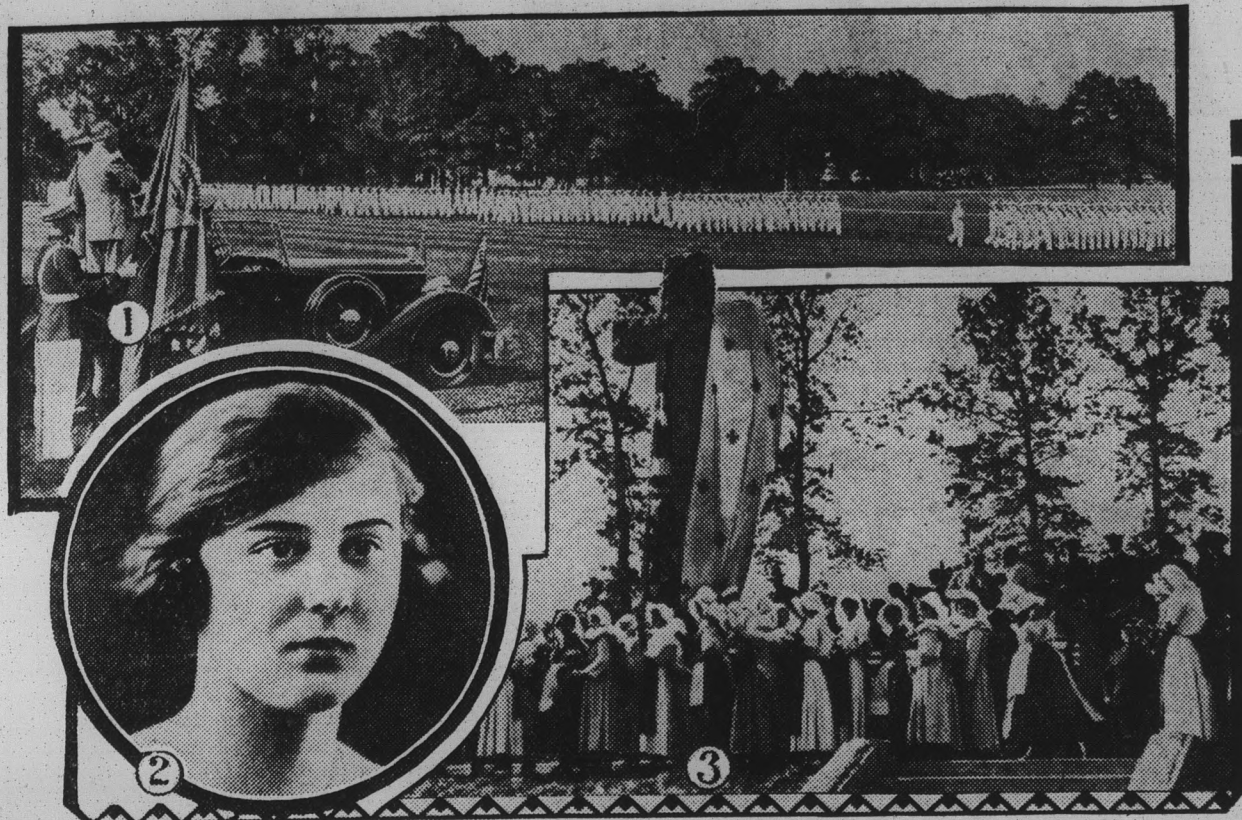

"President Roosevelt is not being disturbed by any presumption that he is endorsing the individual views of Candidate Sinclair. The President, in fact, expects very shortly before the congressional elections to make an address to America, in which he will express the Roosevelt policy and wherein the real democracy he represents the radical remedies which prevent the radicalism of Socialism and the destruction of Communism."

"We under the name of democracy can never advocate or endorse a system which appropriates and confiscates honest property, whether it be the wealth of the millionaires or the weekly wages of millions of toilers."

ON THE advice of Sol Rosenblatt, divisional administrator, the NRA has indefinitely suspended the provisions of the motion picture industry code designed to limit salaries of stars and executives and to eliminate alleged unfair competitive methods in bidding for stars under contract with another company. Mr. Rosenblatt made an investigation and in his report said:

"A star or executive is worth as much as the public can be led to think he is worth by paying to see his offerings. If individual producers find it difficult to gauge in advance the possible value of these services, it is patently impossible for a code authority to exercise any more effective judgment in the matter."

Racing Dogs Valuable

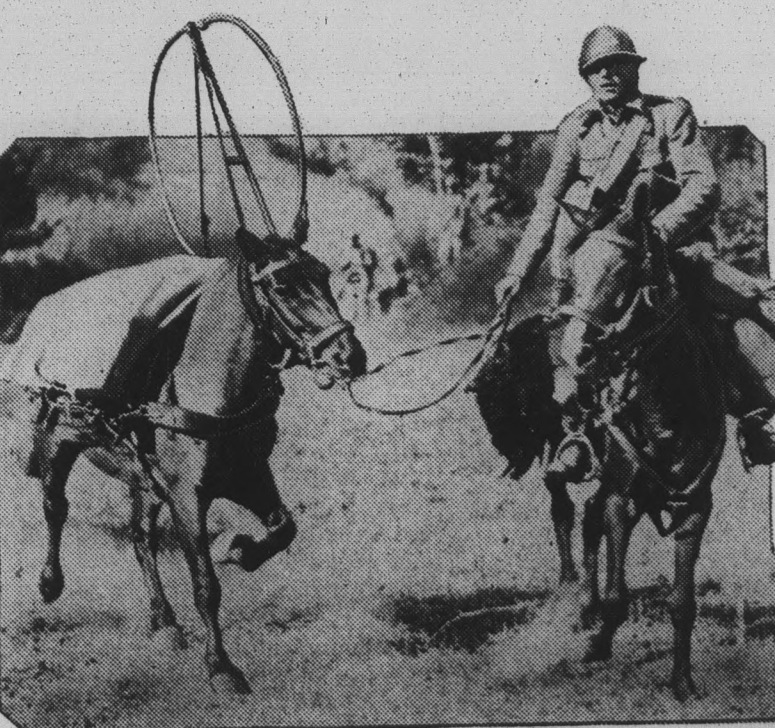

Racing dogs frequently bring higher prices than show or field dogs of the same breed. It is expected that the pups will develop into track winning stock.

The Bed That Was Not Occupied

SOME years ago Lemuel R. Boyce, an officer on the St. Louis police force, was murdered while trying to arrest a burglar.

He was very popular among his associates, and there was an almost universal desire to find the man who had committed the deed and to give him the full penalty of the law.

But the difficulty was to get a clue upon which to hinge their investigations.

It was learned that a number of colored men had been seen in the vicinity of the hotel where the officer was shot, but there was nothing to connect them with the crime.

Chief of Police Smith determined to comb the city in order to locate the known colored criminals.

The job was well done, but it did not bring very practical results. Just about that time the chief learned that one of the men who had been seen loitering in the vicinity of Cardinal street on the night of the murder had been sent to the Missouri reformatory a week later on some minor charge.

He called upon the mother of the suspect and questioned her regarding his movements for the previous month.

She admitted that he was wayward, but was positive that he could not have been the murderer of Policeman Boyce.

She was cross-examined, and as a result of that it was found that Frank White—for that was his name—had not slept at home on the night of March 31.

This was extremely important because that was the night the officer was shot.

In addition to ascertaining this bit of information, the chief of police also came away with a bunch of pawn tickets.

One of them called for a revolver. The officer called on the pawnbroker and obtained the weapon.

It was taken to headquarters, and it was found to be the caliber revolver with which Policeman Boyce had been shot.

The proof of this was discovered by means of the bullet that had been taken from the wound.

Thus armed, the chief of police was in a position to confront the suspected man.

He took the train for Booneville and arrived at the reformatory late at night.

In order to make doubly sure he took the mother of White with him. The superintendent was perfectly willing to have White interviewed, but thought it might be postponed until the next morning. Chief Smith did not agree with him.

On the contrary, he said there were several reasons why the meeting should take place that night.

One of them was that the suspect would be confronted unexpectedly and without opportunity of manufacturing an alibi.

He was roused from a solid slumber and brought into the waiting room.

By previous arrangement, the mother had been placed in an adjoining room.

White was surprised when confronted by the detective—but he was also defiant.

He positively denied all knowledge of the Boyce murder and said that he was sleepy and wanted to go back to bed.

"Where did you spend the night of March 31?" asked Chief Smith suddenly.

"At home in my bed—just where I should have spent it."

"But you did not sleep at home that night," replied the detective in his most positive manner.

"How do you know that?" he asked, half tauntingly.

For reply his inquisitor opened a little window in the room and pointed to an adjoining apartment, where sat the mother of the accused man.

Her unexpected presence shook his nerve.

What had she said to the police? How much of the truth had she revealed?

He was troubled and in the end admitted that his bed had not been occupied that night.

A minute later, when confronted by the revolver which had been retrieved from the pawnshop, he broke down and confessed that he had killed Officer Boyce.

Deaf-Mutes' Language

Deaf-mutes seldom use the deaf-and-dumb alphabet, except when communicating names and dates that must be spelled, writes J. F. Regan, Lawrence, Mass., in Collier's Weekly. They employ an indicative sign or symbol language which is faster than speech and generally understood in many countries, hence mutes of different nationalities can sometimes converse without any knowledge of each other's written language.

Invented the Parachute

The parachute has been known for centuries. In 1783 Sebastian Lenormand practically demonstrated the efficiency of a parachute by descending from the tower of Montpellier observatory. To J. P. Blanchard (1753-1809) is due the idea of using it as an adjunct to the balloon. The seat-pack type of parachute used by the army was developed by the army in 1913 and 1919.

Solving School Clothes Problems

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT to wear "first day of school" and the day after the day after and for months to come in the class room—an ever important problem which the month of September never fails to present as it sings the swan-song of happy vacation time.

To doting mothers and others whose responsibility it is to see that the children of the household go suitably and modestly appareled to school, the message in regard to juvenile fashions according to early fall showings is sure to prove nothing less than inspirational. That designers are giving so much of their best efforts to create attractive, at the same time practical styles for little folks ought to be a very encouraging sign for future costuming.

The trio of cunning models pictured tell a fascinating story of early fall juvenile style trends. These charming fashions were selected for illustration from among a host of equally as attractive outfits for youngsters as displayed in recent style shows held by the Chicago Wholesale Market council. The young miss standing to the left in the picture shows how really style-wise a little girl of this day and generation can be in that she is wearing a frock of green wool crepe, and green as the color card tells us is a leader this season, especially dark mossy greens. Then, too, interest in crepe weaves is very apparent in the fabric realm. Being jumper style this dress is ideal for school wear, for the little maiden can enjoy a fresh blouse each day if she so chooses.

Again brother and sister outfits are proving of tremendous appeal and in this connection it is interesting to note that the two-sister theme is also being advanced, in which costumes showing duplication of color and pattern are sized to fit little girls of different ages. In the instance of the brother and sister outfits pictured, plaid in a gay new cotton weave will go off to school in a manner to delight every eye that beholds this adorable two-some. The contrast of plain with print is effectively emphasized.

Speaking generally of style items stressed at these recent previews of children's fashions one is impressed with the radical color departure in little folks' costumes. Instead of the dainty childish colors usually associated with the juvenile world, little girls are now adopting the greens, browns and reds of their older sisters with of course a continued use of dark blue.

Also it is noted that plaids identify an increasing number of frocks this fall, taking from the formerly favored floral prints considerable of their glory. One clever frock in the style parade looks like a genuine Scotch costume with its red plaid pleated skirt and navy bolero over a white blouse. Frocks of unusual interest also feature the use of three and even four colors.

As to important fabrics it is significant that woollens are proving a strong factor. Wool crepes and novelties lead, while even the cottons take on a wool-like texture.

SMARTLY SIMPLE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This frock of navy and white dotted print in a chulla crepe weave is a good example of the new vogue which is being so enthusiastically acclaimed for simplicity in one's daytime apparel. It is just such a type as the well-dressed school girl will wear, as it will be equally at home in the classroom or at an informal dormitory tea, just as good form in the office, for that matter. Note that it is styled without pleated or ruffled elaboration, fancy lingerie touches or any other detail that would be difficult to handle in laundering, for as most women have found out to their joy and satisfaction these all-rayon crepes wash perfectly.

Rings Over Gloves

Signet rings are being worn over gloves by engaged girls of London.

HAT TRENDS FOLLOW THREE DIRECTIONS

Three trends are the outstanding hat news. The first is the rule "over the face," for virtually every hat pitches forward over the right eyebrow and curls up in the back. The second is double brims with one piece of felt swooping down from the crown, turning under and looping back into the head band. The third is the use of such 1910 fabrics as panne velvet, beaver, soft drape felts and feathers.

Feathers are everywhere. Black birds of paradise swoop forward from under the wide curved-up brim of a black panne velvet. A white bird, wings outspread, hangs head down from the back of a black felt. Five little rose birds lie flattened on the crown of another black felt.

Muffs Assume New Shapes for Fall and New Furs

Muffs for fall are assuming new shapes and new furs.

There's just enough room in them for your two hands, and after all, that's all the room a muff needs, when you consider the situation impartially.

These are shown in sleek, flat furs, for wear with furless coats and suits, and they're the last whisper from the last boat from Paris.

Practically the same effect is gained by the new muff gloves shown in recent displays of advance winter styles.

These are of Angora knit, with a long cuff which may be pulled down over each hand. Place the hands together in the approved fashion for muff-holding, and lo!—you have a muff.

Satin Blouses

Satin in peculiarly becoming off-shades made with drapery necklines and full elbow sleeves is first choice in the thorough line-up of luxurious blouses which the shops are showing for fall.

Plaid Crepes

Mossy crepes in plaid patterns will be shown in jacket suits, scarfs and blouses for early fall.

GROWING OLD GRACEFULLY

There is a steadfast belief that one's years should govern his feelings; that when a person arrives at an age above fifty he is getting old. Not that there are any horrors in old age, but that he is nearing the sunset of life and it is in order to prepare for the same. Some people are just commencing to live at fifty, while with others they feel their finish and are arranging for their shroud. The mind is inevitably a ruling governor over our being.

If we are looking for an early grave we will not be disappointed, but if life is full of lasting joy, activity and hope, there will be a response of feeling young even in old age. Perhaps this is better known as "growing old gracefully," for of all the arts, it seems that the greatest is the art of living. We must learn to live or the death warrant will disappoint us. First, "know thyself." Keeping fit is the warning note; to fail to achieve the abundant life, fate will wave a signal of deadly warning across our pathway.

Health is the great foundation for happiness. When we eat to live, instead of living to eat, there will be told an interesting chapter about us all. Health applies to the mental as well as the physical, thus the need of right kind of mental food as well as proper food for the body is necessary. It is better to prefer plain living and high thinking, to a hungry brain and a full stomach. It is also an art to have the capacity of receiving pleasure from the common things which is one of the secrets of a happy life. Dr. Johnson Brigham, state librarian of Iowa, has written a remarkable book, at 88 years of age, entitled, "The Youth of Old Age." It represents a spirit of optimism, where enthusiasm increases with years and the bloom of youth sparkles in the eye.

What are we to do with Russia, the self-styled convert to American patriotism? Her promises made last January to abide in co-operative trade and friendship have not been lived up to, but we are still enduring and waiting for her on probation to make good, if she cares to. Russia sought recognition; we believed at the time that a better commercial and social understanding and agreement might be established. Her integrity to live up to her promises not only has been disappointing, but, to a great many, not surprising. Settlement of the Russian debt question, a vast foreign market for American manufactured products, and cessation of soviet propaganda in the United States were the three benefits promised when diplomatic recognition was accorded the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics by the administration. Misplaced confidence is the verdict for she seems to have won recognition without paying anything for it. Soviet propaganda has continued somewhat more briskly than before recognition. Russia is now buying considerably less here than before recognition. And now the negotiations for debt settlement have collapsed.

In diagnosing the "brain trust," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, said President Roosevelt is the brains and the trust is the faith of the American people. The General, while in a temper tangent, forgot his patriotic fidelity and resigned, but on second thought, came back to the President after due consideration. Now he is out again, likely for good. What people should do during these times of disorder, is exercise cool judgement and not lose their heads. There never was sharper criticism in the administration affairs than now. It may be from fits of political rancor by the recreant and less faithful, that undue attacks are made. The leading Federal organizations that are stormed with wordy brickbats are National Recovery Administration, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Public Works Administration, the Civil Works Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the National Housing Plan. President Roosevelt needs all the co-operation he can get from everyone, and to do so, no political cloven-hoofs should be allowed to tread in the pathway of progress.

Here is a most invaluable relic. A printer's composing stick used by Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia in 1725. Now this may be just a piece of common news-history to the ordinary layman who reads the newspaper, but just mention this to a printer and see his eyes brighten up! A printer's stick was used before the linotype machine was invented for setting type for the newspaper column. This old relic of 209 years is in the possession of Wilfred W. Fry, of Philadelphia and with the "stick" is an old, worn steel composing rule used by Franklin, necessary for type-setting by hand. No one knows what weighty subjects were put in print by this sagacious moulder of public opinion!

No splendor, not in all humanity's experience, can come so near to the heart as a gorgeous sunset in California. The sinking of this terrestrial ball of fire beneath the horizon, is only a brief part of the grandeur for the afterglow to be followed by the silence of a twilight, is an inspiration to the esthetic mind. Nature turns the key in the door of business and daily activities; families gather into their homes, life's sacred abode; there to mingle together, and then a preparation for the slumber of the night, Nature's great restorer! All becomes a delightful stillness. It is the tranquility of the night, a heritage for mankind little appreciated unless mind and heart get a real slant into the depths of meaning of an evening sunset.

The Montreal (Canada) Herald recently celebrated its 123rd anniversary of existence; but the significant part of the story is that during all these years it has never skipped an issue. This seems almost unbelievable, when considering the life of the average newspaper. The Herald made its first issue in 1811, about the time when Napoleon was forming the national guards in France and was preparing for the Russian campaign the next year which ended disastrously for him. This was just prior to the War of 1812, when the United States was drawn into two years of bloody strife with Canada.

What Vocation Shall My Boy Choose?

By A. B. Clemons,
Director, Schools of Mechanical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools.

We live in a changing world. Opportunities for success in the future will differ from the past. A boy's wise choice of his life work may do much to determine success or failure. How shall he choose?

The Internal Combustion Engine

THE Burlington Zephyr and Union Pacific stream-line trains have provided dramatic demonstrations of the expanding field for internal combustion engines, and it is safe to say that no field promises wider or more rapid development than the use of internal combustion power units operating on oil, gas or gasoline.

Internal combustion engines operating on a low cost liquid fuel, are furnishing power for battleships and electric power plants, tractors and flour mills, locomotives and dredges. If the use of such power continues to expand during the next decade as rapidly as it has in the past, the field has been occupied only on its fringes.

It is, however, a field that requires technical training—training that must be acquired either at the engineering schools of the universities or by study while on the job. Both methods have their advantages. If the latter be chosen, a junior position in a power plant where internal combustion engines are used would be the first step for the young man anxious to become expert in the operation of the engines. For the young man interested chiefly in designing the engines, a first step would be a junior position in a drafting room. In either case study will be required to supplement experience.

The internal combustion engine is unquestionably man's greatest achievement in harnessing the maximum amount of power to be obtained from liquid or gaseous fuels. Without it we would have neither the airplane nor the automobile as we know them today. As a development progresses, no man can foresee the ultimate limits of its use.

Great Teachers

"How to reach the Great Teachers" will be the subject for discussion Thursday, October 4th at 7:30 p.m. when the Ocean Beach Theosophical club meets in the Civic Center on Abbott street with Mrs. Mera Forbes as the speaker. Mrs. Forbes will also give a short lesson in Sanskrit. Through millions of years there have been great teachers. Come and have your queries answered.

CLEAR AUTO CERTIFICATES WHEN PAYING REALTY TAXES, ASSESSOR SAYS

Automobile owners can be saved an extra trip if, when they get their tax bills or pay them, they will stop in at the assessor's office at 923 First avenue, which is near the tax collector's office, and have their automobile white certificates validated. Property owners who have secured their automobile tax with their real estate need not pay the tax in order to have the certificate validated. The fact that the automobile is listed with the real estate permits the assessor to validate the white certificate.

Tax bills will probably be ready within the next few weeks.

New license plates cannot be obtained from the Motor Vehicle department in December and January until the white certificate has a stamp on the back of it showing that the automobile taxes have been paid.

"I GIVE MY LOVE" STARTS SUNDAY AT ORPHEUM

Starting Sunday, the Orpheum theatre offers their patrons another hit stage and screen show. Vicki Baum's popular "I Give My Love" will be the feature screen attraction starring Wayne Gibson and Paul Lukas. Supporting these notable stars are such fine players as Eric Linden, Dorothy Appleby, Anita Louise and Sam Hardy.

From the pen of the famous author of "Grand Hotel" this picture presents an absorbing theme, that of a mother torn twist love and loyalty with highlights of humor and love well stressed. Paul Lukas gives one of the best performances of the year in his role opposite Wayne Gibson and portrays a character which will be long remembered by film fans. "I Give My Love" has recently completed a notable run at the great Roxy theatre in New York.

On the stage Ted Mack will present six headline acts of vaudeville which are being booked especially for the unique stage presentation Mack is arranging. The band will be seen in several novelty musical numbers and the members are arranging specialties to entertain the patrons.

AUGUST BEVERAGE TAX

IS $159,519.17

SACRAMENTO, September 24 — Altho beer and wine sales continue to be brisk, the state tax for August on these beverages at two cents per gallon amounted to $159,519.17, marking a decline of $4,401.05 under the record smashing total of $163,920.22 for last month.

OCEAN BEACH POST NO. 433 AND AUXILIARY

Ocean Beach post No. 433, the American Legion, will hold its next regular business meeting at the Legion hall on Thursday, Oct. 4. The meeting will be called to order promptly at 8 p. m., as there is a great deal of business to conduct.

All committeemen are urged to be present, and a report on the recent party at Tich's tavern will be made. The post is planning a number of other such affairs and members are urged to be present and voice their opinions.

A number of community betterment projects have been mapped out for the coming year, and there is the matter of membership, which must be looked after in the very near future. As California has a candidate for National commander at the Miami convention October 20 to 25, it is the wish of department commander Archie M. Closson, that an early membership report be made. Those who can possibly do so, are urged to pay their dues on or about October 1, as the Legion year begins October 20.

There are a number of vital questions coming before the post at each meeting and members cannot know what is going on unless they attend. The post is off to a good start, and it is the intention of commander Chadwick and other officers and members that the stride be maintained.

No party in recent years was as successful as the one on Sept. 21. It was estimated that more than 1000 legionnaires and their friends attended. Keep faith with the officers and they will serve you well; attend every meeting and learn more about the work and accomplishments of the American Legion and be proud of it and the World War service you rendered to the nation.

The next regular business meeting of the auxiliary unit will be held Wednesday night, October 3, at 8 o'clock sharp in the Legion hall. All members are requested to be on time as we have a good many things to do and need your help in deciding some very weighty matters. We are planning to hold a card party in the near future at which the entire community is invited to attend, and the proceeds will be used to carry on this year's welfare work, for as we see it, there is plenty need for such and we aim to do our share.

AUGUST GASOLINE TAXES $3,379,024.04

SACRAMENTO, September 24 — Reaching a total of $3,379,024.04, California gasoline taxes for August continue to show a decline in comparison with the corresponding month of last year. Some improvement is seen, however, in the ratio of decrease which is only half as great as that of the month previous.

H. G. Cattell, member of the State Board of Equalization from the fourth district, embracing southern California, made this revelation here today when the Board completed its assessments of motor vehicle fuel tax liability for the past month.

"We had hoped," said Cattell, "that the gasoline tax income might continue to gain as it did during March, April and May, but a decline set in last June and has continued since."

Comparison of sales for last month with those for August 1933 shows a loss in tax liability of $157,350.98. This is a decline of only 4.4 percent.

Randolphe Earle, of Eagle Rock, formerly of Mission Beach, has been spending a few days here.

About sixty were present at the meeting of the Old Age Townsend club, at the meeting at the Casino Monday night. Addresses were made by Mr. Izaak and Miss Long of San Diego. Their next Monday night at the same place will be addressed by George Burnham.

The Mission Beach school opened with 113 children. Miss Neal, former teacher, has been transferred to Ocean Beach, and Miss Genevra Marxmiller is taking her place.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Weir, who have spent the summer at 733 Verona court, will remove October 1, to their San Diego home.

Col. and Mrs. J. N. Pickering of La Mesa, have been spending a week at 3801 Ocean front walk.

Mrs. Samuel B. Pearson, of Three Rivers, who expected to return here in October, has decided to remain another month at Morro Bay, where she is visiting friends.

The Mission Beach Woman's club has appointed its social committee for the year the following ladies: Mrs. L. L. Parker, Mrs. James Kaye, Mrs. O. F. Eckles and Mrs. Earl Anthony.

Mrs. Earl Anthony will represent the club on the committee in charge of the Easter sunrise services held at Mount Soledad annually.

Guild of St. Andrews-by-the-Sea met last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. William S. Hunt. Services are now held Sunday mornings at 9:30 at the club rooms of the woman's club. Rev. John B. Osborn is officiating.

Mrs. J. M. Asher, entertained in her bay front home, last Wednesday night, the Choral club of Pacific Beach, of which Mrs. Asher is a member, with a pot luck supper, honoring Mrs. William J. Ellis, who is leaving Pacific Beach. Tables were placed on the porch overlooking the bay. Mrs. Ellis has been a member of the chorus and the Woman's club for more than five years.

LONG TIME FRIEND WORKER FOR JUDGE CURTIS

Because he desired to see a man retained on the bench who is thoroughly acquainted and deeply in sympathy with strata of society and able to differentiate between those things which should be upheld and those which should be condemned, Raymond A. McGann, long-time resident of San Diego and prominent civic worker, announced today that he had accepted the managership of the campaign to re-elect Judge Everett N. Curtis to Justice Court one.

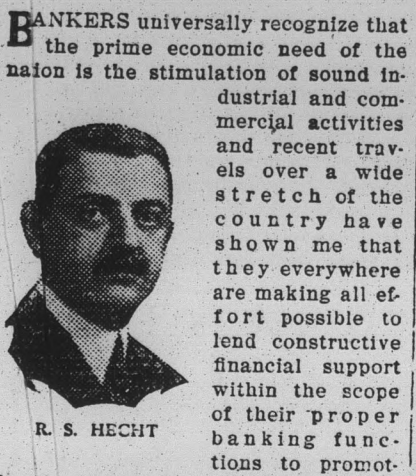

Campaign offices will be established soon in downtown San Diego, McGann said and the drive to re-elect Judge Curtis will begin immediately. Before the general election, Nov. 6, McGann said he hoped to make every San Diegan familiar with the remarkable record Judge Curtis has made during his three years on the bench in handling more than 5,000 cases, of which less than 25 have been appealed.

"I want every voter in San Diego, interested in good government, to know that Judge Curtis is a representative of the people and is not associated, affiliated or in league with any clique, faction or political society, and when he is voted a second term in office he will continue to serve with justice to all and favors to none," McGann said.

In his fifty years of experience with people, McGann said he has never known a judge who is more fair, honest and conscientious than Curtis.

BANKERS SUPPORT SOUND EXPANSION

By R. S. HECHT
Vice President, American Bankers Association

R. S. HECHT

BANKERS universally recognize that the prime economic need of the nation is the stimulation of sound industrial and commercial activities and recent travels over a wide stretch of the country have shown me that they everywhere are making all effort possible to lend constructive financial support within the scope of their proper banking functions to promoting the expansion of business activity.

Frequently in times past when our country suffered from an economic depression and consequent unemployment on a large scale, the rise of some broad new industrial development, such for instance as a new industry like the automobile industry, has been a powerful factor in stimulating a return or an accelerated growth of national prosperity. Such a movement means the creation of new wealth, the employment of large groups of people on useful lines and as a consequence the production and distribution of sound, effective purchasing power, which is a form of wholesome economic stimulant that has none of the evils of monetary inflation.

A New Force for Business Improvement
Perhaps we have at hand, if not the rising of a wholly new industry, a measurable equivalent in the potentialities of a widespread rebuilding and modernizing movement such as home renovating, plant remodeling, the putting of our railroads on a high speed air conditioned basis and other valuable developments in the construction field. The effects of such activities on employment and many lines of business would be most beneficial and I can repeat without reservation that we bankers are willing and eager to play our full economic part in any such constructive developments.

It has been made to appear that money has not gone to work because of the timidity of bankers rather than what is a true explanation, because business men have not had enough confidence in the business outlook to borrow the dollar from the banker and put it to work.

The basic requisite to the expansion of commercial bank loans is sound, normal business conditions on which to conduct sound, normal banking operations. The best business a bank can wish for is the opportunity to loan money to successful business men and manufacturers imbued with confidence to enter upon aggressive business enterprises and endowed with the ability to bring them to successful conclusions. Such loans mean business activity for the community, growing pay rolls and prosperity, and the banker wants to make them because to identify with such activities not only means profit to him but, additionally, brings him the reward of good will in his community.

There is no better proof of the great desire of banks to take care of the short term requirements of the business world than to point out the abnormally low rates at which this demand is being supplied at the present time.

BANK DEPOSITS WERE SAFEST INVESTMENTS

High Government Official Says No Investments Except U. S. Bonds Suffered as Little Loss as Deposits in Closed Banks

WASHINGTON, D. C.—No form of investments except Government bonds suffered as little loss as deposits in closed banks during the years 1931-32-33. Jesse H. Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, declared in a recent address.

"A point generally overlooked in connection with bank failures in this period, is that upon the whole, depositors in closed banks will get a somewhat larger percentage than has been true in bank failures over a period of say twenty-five years," Mr. Jones said. "Heretofore they have gotten about 58%, but in these wholesale bank closings, my estimate is that they will, upon the average, get about 65% of their deposits."

"Another point worthy of mention is that a depositor in a closed bank loses only a part of his deposit, while the bank stockholder loses all, plus a stock assessment."

"No form of investment, except Government bonds, has suffered as little loss as deposits in closed banks, and while I appreciate that there is little consolation in this fact, those who had their savings invested in stocks, bonds, mortgages, real estate, industrial investments, or in businesses of any kind, have had losses very much greater, and in a much larger percentage, than have depositors in closed banks."

"It is for these reasons, and others not necessary here to enumerate, that it is not possible to justify paying depositors in closed banks with the taxpayers' money."

Alco Bill Declared Unfavorable by Riflemen

CALIFORNIA STATE RIFLE ASS'N (Affiliated with National Rifle Association of America)
OFFICE OF SECRETARY-TREAS.
532 Oakford Drive
Los Angeles, California

H. H. Hartvigsen, Editor, News, Ocean Beach, California
Dear Sir:

Under the leadership of a member of the California Prison Board, Julian H. Alco, a State-wide initiative campaign has been launched to force a total disarmament law on the people of this State. The measure is known as the Alco Crime Prevention Law, but I am satisfied that study of the measure will convince any red-blooded editor that it should be known as the Alco Crime Promotion Law.

This bill makes it a felony to possess, sell, buy, loan, lease, trade, exchange or otherwise transfer a weapon capable of being concealed upon the person. The only exceptions are the Army, Navy and the National Guard when on duty. Police guards, guards for banks and similar institutions, may be issued permits for concealable weapons from the Superior Court Judge having jurisdiction in the county in which the pistol is to be carried.

If the Alco bill would in any sense disarm the criminal the California State Rifle Association would not oppose it. Our recent experience with prohibition clearly demonstrated that the law did not prohibit. This law is in the same category, and will be a distinct advantage to the crook because of the disarmament of reputable citizens. Even the proponents of the measure admit that criminals will continue to obtain concealable weapons. They know as well as we that the present source now of pistols and machine guns for the criminal is thru the bootlegger, and not the legitimate dealer. It is reported that under the present administration of Mr. Alco five pistols were manufactured in San Quentin prison by convicts under the very eyes of the guards. Anyone with a hack saw can make a concealable weapon from a .410 gauge shotgun, which can be legally purchased from a sporting goods dealer. All that is necessary is to cut off the barrel and the stock behind the pistol grip. Ball cartridges are on the market that will function in the .410 gauge.

The naive claim is made by Mr. Alco that this continued bootlegging of pistols will not be as serious as the present legitimate sale and possession of such arms under the California permit system because (say the proponents of the bill) the police, when they find a man with a gun on him, will have all the evidence they need to send him to jail for a year. At the present time the police have this right under the existing law, but the crime of possession is not a felony. Governing bodies should move slowly in creating new felonies. Our present law is adequate if it is enforced. Under the Alco law an honest citizen defending his home with a gun would go to the penitentiary, disgraced, with his franchise taken from him. No Legislature would pass such a bill, only a reformer, seeing thru the eyes of a kindergarten would sponsor such a law. It was in such a manner that prohibition found its way into our constitution.

Our organization stands ready to cooperate on any legislation that will keep concealable weapons in the hands of respectable citizens only. We are willing to submit to fingerprinting, gun registration or other legitimate means to identify an arm, but we cannot subscribe to the idea that to disarm the householder and to make a felony punishable by one year in prison will do anything else but aid the promotion of crime.

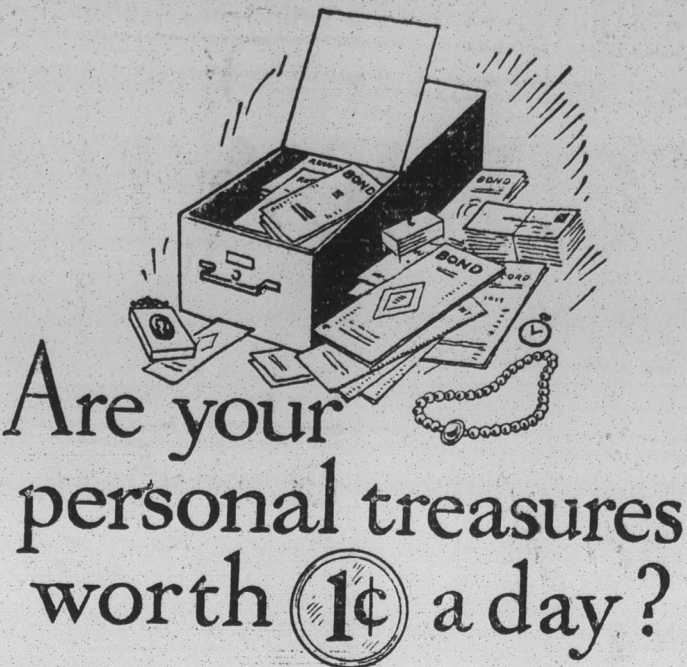

Yours very truly,

The Punch Bowl Returns

by Jane Rogers

NOW that repeal is here, what do we do? Over and over again the question is being asked and now we are in process of discovering the answer. The whole of the answer is not yet clear, but one thing becomes increasingly certain. We are seeing a rapid revival of the punch bowl this summer.

A punch bowl was practically indispensable to the pre-Volstead generation when large numbers of guests were to be entertained, and it is going to prove even more indispensable to the present generation. True, wines and liqueurs, scotch, rye and brandy can once more be legally bought, but equally true is it that they are expensive. There are many of us who cannot afford to serve such costly beverages to a large gathering.

The punch bowl supplies the answer particularly in hot weather. Punch is a practically universal favorite—and the punch bowl makes a comparatively small amount of alcoholic beverages serve a remarkably large number of people. Furthermore, the sugar which is called for as an ingredient of most punches is one of those quick sources of the energy we need so much during the heat of mid-summer.

Below is a famous recipe which will enable you to perform the rites of hospitality without totally unbalancing the family budget.

Fish House Punch

1 pound of sugar
1 1/2 pints of rum
1 pint brandy
Juice of 12 lemons
Juice of 6 oranges
1 pint of cold tea
Mix all together until the sugar is dissolved. Add one pint of ginger ale, one pint of charged water and one cup of chopped fresh fruits. Place a large lump of ice in the punch bowl and pour the punch over it, first stirring thoroughly.

HAVE YOU READING MATERIAL FOR THE SHUT-INS

All those who have magazines or other reading material for the sick in hospitals of the city, and children in the homes, are urged to leave same at the home of Mrs. Edith Reich, 4721 Newport avenue, who will carry on the work formerly done by Mrs. Carrie Borchardt, who has moved to Lemon Grove.

Parent Teacher Ass'n Go To Church Sunday Dad's Council Too

From October 1, to 12, is enrollment time for members of the PTA. Every member helps. Your problems are our problems. Getting together and talking things over, listening to speakers who are nationally known authorities on child welfare and home problems, helps us all in a large way.

During the state convention, which will be held in San Diego the last week in May, 1935, we San Diegans will be privileged to listen to state executives in PTA circles. Many parents have not had these opportunities. It is to these parents we wish to extend a most sincere welcome to come and attend our meetings, join our study groups, and work with us. The Parent Teacher movement helps the community, the school and the home. When we re-enroll we help our city, state and nation.

DAD'S COUNCIL PTA

In a survey made by a nationally recognized magazine, a few years ago, a group of statisticians agreed that a certain school teacher hit the nail on the head when she wrote the prize-winning letter on "What is wrong with our public schools?"

Her answer to the question was quite simple. She believed (that was several years ago) that our public school system was inadequately managed because the average father was not sold on education.

She got the prize.

But this is no reflection upon the parent today.

In many homes Dad will ask, during the next two weeks, "Must I send in my membership too? Isn't one membership from a home enough?" Fathers are parents and are eligible to membership in the parent teacher organization. This year, when much legislation is under way, the Dad's will want to have a hand in PTA affairs.

OCEAN BEACH PTA APPROVED LIST OF MOVIES

Suitable for children from ages of 8 to 14.

Big Hearted Herbert, Here Comes the Navy, In Love with Life, Judge Priest, One Night of Love, She Loves me Not, Their Big Moment, Treasure Island, Beyond Bengal, Return of the Bulldog Drummond, Randy Rides Alone, Wandering Jew, World Moves On, Women in Command, Blind Date, Cat's Paw, Jane Eyre, Fighting to Live, Love Past Thirty, Old Fashioned Day, Handy Andy, Lost Jungle, Loud Speaker, Men's Game, Most Precious Thing in Life, Smoking Guns and Wild Boy.

Nervous children should not necessarily see Treasure Island. Children should be accompanied by parents with an understanding attitude when viewing this picture. "Glorify the actor and not the deed"—in real life, as in the movie, says Nellie C. Horner in her address before the PTA on Wednesday afternoon last week.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

On Sunday afternoon Boris de Zirkoff will deliver a forum-lecture on "Why Theosophy?" at the Theosophical Headquarters on Point Loma at 3 o'clock. Questions will be received and answered by the speaker. All are welcome.

Last Sunday afternoon Mrs. Guy Ponsonby lectured on "Life's Consummations—Death and Rebirth," and referring to the harvest-time and the other seasons of the year as mirrored in the cycle of man's life, said: The universe is man's home, his harvest-field, and every harvesting implies a further sowing. The reaper surveys his fields, sees where the seed has been fruitful and where the soil needs replenishing and in so doing plans for the coming seed-time. Thus did the ancients hold the harvest-time as sacred to the consideration of the mystic teachings about death and the after death states.

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

Pupils having hobbies have been bringing samples of their collections to show at opening exercises.

Extemporaneous speaking is easy when there are such interesting things to talk about.

Parkie Burroughs who has traveled in Arabia, generously shared his pleasure of a gift from his father which consisted of several complete costumes from different nations. Tuesday he was an Arabian boy dressed in a bright red fez and long flowing striped silk robe of many colors. Another costume is that of a Mexican peon which Parkie's father had made for him while on his sugar plantation in Mexico.

Billy Reynolds brought his specimens of rare tropical shells which he collected when he was living in Guam.

Patricia Welch proudly exhibited two glacial rocks which contain gold. She told of how her father found them in a placer mine in Seward, Alaska.

Betty Lisa Berg, from Loma Portal has just enrolled in the kindergarten. Lane Ussery, who has just returned from Rhode Island has again entered the Warren Walker school.

MIDGET MOTOR CARS TO RACE SUNDAY NIGHT

Sunday night, September 30, will be the next meeting for the Midget Motor cars. The change was made to accommodate the Los Angeles County Fair, which requested the appearance of the popular little speed wagons, as an added attraction. Linn Platner, who holds the local sanction of the Midget association, readily granted the request and shifted his date to Sunday.

Last Saturday night, a crowd of 1800 fans braved the rainy weather and sat through a drizzle to watch the speed grinds. The races were sensational and had the fans standing on their feet most of the time.

Driven by the world's most famous racing pilots, the little cars have a speed of 115 miles per hour on the straightaway, which is cut down considerably by the dangerous turns on the small track, however, they are sent around the oval at as great a speed as will permit them to stay on their wheels.

Many thrills are in store during the program, which consists of nine events, in addition to the qualifying races.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES TROOP NO. 53

At the regular Scout meeting last Friday, Sept. 21, the following officers were elected.

Esther Batt, troop-treasurer
Quincy Wright, troop scribe.
The following girls will serve as patrol leaders. Josephine Castanien, Yvonne Graban, Quincy Wright.

Julia Kelly of Point Loma troop 56 will be acting lieutenant. Mrs. Ada Marts who is very interested in the Ocean Beach troop of Girl Scouts will serve as lieutenant.

The troop welcomes Dorothy Phillips back to Ocean Beach troop.

On October 5, the girls will give a tea for their mothers and friends interested in scouting, at the Point Loma Methodist church.

Mrs. Alice Shallenberger will be a guest of the girls at this tea.

Quincy Wright, scribe.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy.

The legacy had providentially answered the on to the country problem. Now that the strain was eased, she had but a confused remembrance of the days during which she had cleared and sub-leased the apartment. At the last moment, Jane Mack had begged to go with her. Her eyes were giving out for sewing, she had said, but she knew almost everything there was to know about a house—she had been trained by a New England mother. Prudence had hugged her in her relief. Jane Mack might be grim and a confirmed pessimist but she could cook, while she herself farmed and, if opportunity and time allowed, worked at her craft.

Could she afford to keep Si Puffer as helper on the place? her thoughts ran on. She couldn't afford not to at present. Already he had stood like a guardian angel between her and the voice in the fog; how he had growled the name, "Len Calloway!" What had the man wanted? Something in his demand had antagonized her. "Tomorrow" was almost here. Soon she would know.

The muslin hangings swung into the room like two frail, transparent wings. Had the wind changed?

She ran to the window. The fog had cleared as if by magic. With a surge of indefinable longing, the girl looked up at the star-punctured heavens. With a shaky laugh at her own absurdity, she flung out her hands toward the man in the moon.

"Your excellency, I thank you for this royal welcome! Prue of Prosperity farm salutes you!"

CHAPTER II

Prudence stopped settling her possessions the next day at noon long enough to inspect the outside of her inheritance. Her tour of inspection ended at the long weather-stained barn.

With a frenzied "cut-cut-cadaa-kut!" a black hen flew down from the topmost loft. Prudence watched her twit and cackle and flap through the open doorway, before her eyes returned to the spot from which she had descended. Had she been stealing a nest? Could she find it? What fun!

She tugged a light ladder into place, and with excited agility mounted. Past the first mow. Up to the highest, almost touching the roof. That black hen hadn't been sitting up here to see the soldiers go by, she must have left a nest. She touched warm feathers. A sharp peck from a yellow beak dampened her lashes but steeled her determination. She shut her eyes tight and grabbed. She flung the squawking fowl to an adjacent mound of hay where it made the rafters ring with its outraged cackle.

Prudence sat back on her heels and counted. Eight eggs!

"SI! Oh, SI!"

The cheery call came from below. A man's voice. Not the Voice in the Fog. That had appeared in person early this morning. Who could it be? Prudence cautiously placed the eggs in her white skirt, gathered up the front of it, and leaned too far over. The hay slid. Struggling to retard her progress, she went with it, down, down into the arms of a man.

"Boy! That was a narrow squeak!" Prudence had closed her lids tight when she felt herself going. She opened them wide, looked up into the deepest bluest eyes she ever had seen. Her glance traveled on to light hair which had an engaging kink at the temple, then back to the face. Its expression sent a ripple along her nerves. Who was he? The muscles of his jaws were set, his arms still gripped her.

"Seems idiotic to say just 'Thank you' when you really—" Her smile was tremulous, her voice shaken. She shivered.

"Don't think about it. I was the man for the moment, all right. What possessed you to lean over that haystack?"

Prudence freed herself and stepped back. She resented the dictatorial question.

"Don't lose your temper. That's my usual one-two-three-go! method of descending from haystacks. Rather original—if you get what I mean." Now that his color had returned, the curve of his sensitive mouth set her on the defensive. It was so darn boyish for a man his age; he must be about thirty.

"Okay with me. Every move a picture. But is this method of transporting eggs also original with you?" He glanced at her white skirt which she still gripped with one hand. From the side a stream of egg yolks was dripping.

"My word!" She looked from her skirt to his perfectly tailored gray sports suit. It was liberally spotted with yellow which had not been part of the weaver's design. The sight wiped her eyes and voice clean of assumed indifference.

"I'm sorry! I'm terribly sorry. I—I've made you look like an omelette." His eyes deepened as they met hers contritely appealing. His lips tightened. Was he furiously angry because she had spoiled his clothes?

"Truly, I'm sorry. I haven't even thanked you for saving me from a horrid fall—I'd loathe being mugged—forgive me for being flippant. I am on my knees in apology for the damage to your clothes. Come into the house and Jane Mack will take off the spots. She's a demon cleanser."

"No, thank you, my man will do it." "If you scorn our help, you will let me say 'Thank you,' won't you?" She held out her hand. "I am Prudence Schuyler of Prosperity farm."

"Don't apologize for the damage, which amounts to nothing, or the snub which I deserved. I am—"

"Well, Rod, here you are!" Si Puffer in work-stained blue overalls extended a knob-jointed hand. "What you doin' here? Thought you left High Ledges last week. Whatta mean is, didn't know you and Miss Prue was acquainted."

So this was the glamorous Rodney Gerard! The playboy whom she had planned to treat with superb disdain when or if they met! Life certainly had a nice sense of humor to fling her into his arms. Prudence defiantly answered the question in Si Puffer's slate-color eyes.

"We aren't—that is, we weren't, but quite suddenly I took the quickest way down from the haystack, Mr. Man-of-the-Moment caught me—and look!" She held out her skirt.

"Well, I'll be darned—and eggs forty cents a dozen! You'd better chuck the mess an' go get that skirt cleaned."

"I'm going. Good morning, Mr.—Mr. Rod, and thank you again." Prudence smiled and nodded to the two men watching her, as she left the barn.

"Pretty as a movie star and smart as a steel trap," Si Puffer commented.

"Who is she? What is she doing here?"

"Haven't you heard? Austin Schuyler left all his holdings here to that slip of a girl. He up an' died, just after he'd paid a lot of money for an annuity, too. Can you beat it! Miss Prue came last night with a hatchet-faced woman who's going to be the housekeeper. She's come to the farm to see if she can get her brother David's health back. They say he had an income enough to live on—he was a lawyer—besides his practice till the crash came. Two years ago his wife walked out on him with his sister Julie's husband."

"Schuyler! Is that the family! That rotten scandal staggered even the most hard-boiled people I know. This Miss Schuyler's sister Julie was charming but too domestic for the man she married. Her husband wanted a woman who would make other men stop, look, listen. His wife's sister-in-law was that type, so he stepped up and took her. He didn't have her long. Mrs. David Schuyler was smashed up in an automobile accident a week after she ran away."

"Gorry-me. Makes me think of them words in the Bible, 'an' the wages of sin is death.' Folks say David Schuyler put in all his spare time helping the down-an'-out at a rescue mission. Miss Prue's got grit. Whatta mean is, last night when I brought them in, the road was so thick with fog you could cut it. Once when I looked round I could see tears glistening in her eyes, but she kept her voice like music. I'll bet she sings."

"So she intends to farm! Haven't they any money?"

"Lost it; investments wiped out as quick and as clean as you can wipe writing from a slate. Whatta mean is, they lost their money, that's the talk in the village. She can get their living all right from the place if—if only she will stick it out. In spite of radios an' movies, I guess there's not seem much like the city. Thought you'd gone, Rod. Don't you usually go flying or playing polo or visiting this time of year?"

Rodney Gerard looked quickly at Puffer's inscrutable face. "You're not crazy about me as a solid citizen, are you, SI? I was going, but Len Calloway held me up. He wants my decision on the timber now so that he can make his contracts for the increase in his cut."

Puffer rubbed his hand up and down his unshaven cheek. He drawled: "I'll donate one piece of advice, Rod. Don't trust Calloway. Whatta mean is, that old trouble between you two is only smolderin'. Len's always been a queer mixture of terrible temper and a sense of justice. When he gets mad he sees blood-red."

"He's all right now, SI. He has been mighty fair and agreeable."

"Hmp. That's because he wants something. Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth when he aims to please. Just the same, don't let him have that timber."

Rodney Gerard paused in the act of applying a lighter to a cigarette. "What's the idea? You told me yourself that a lot of big stuff ought to come out for the good of the forest."

"I did. There's thousands of feet of standing timber that's no longer growing, more than half of it decayin' an' likely to be destroyed by the first storm. I told you something else too—that you ought to have a forester here to mark every tree that was to come out, not leave it to the judgment of any man who can swing an ax, and that you ought to be here yourself when the cutting was done to see it was done right."

"I haven't forgotten, but, SI, they cut trees when the snow is on the ground. What would I do here in winter?"

"Folks have lived here through a winter, Rod, and slept and et like human beings. I calculate 'twouldn't hurt you none."

With a boyish shout of laughter, Rodney Gerard flung his arm about Puffer's shoulders.

"Don't you go back on me. I bank on you to stand by me as you have ever since you taught me to hold a gun. As to Len Calloway, I'll say 'nothing doing' to him now, and when I get around to it I'll have a forester give us a report on the trees."

"All right, Roddy. When you get the forester here, have him look over that wood lot of Miss Prue's. There's about five hundred acres along the rise that Austin Schuyler bought of Len Calloway's father. That stretch called The Hundreds between the highway an' the sky line. You an' I have been shooting over it year after year. It's the best stand of spruce and pine in the county. Ought to bring that spunky little girl a nice bunch of cash; but I'm afraid if Len Calloway gets hold of Miss Prue before she knows its value, he'll make a sharp trade with her. He's the kind of chap girls and women fall for—only the Lord knows why and he ain't telling—kinder mesmerizes them, I guess. He held me up in the fog last evening to ask when she was comin'. I didn't let on I had her in the back seat that very minute. Didn't want him to get in a hink till I'd warned her to watch her step. But he beat me to it. He's been to see her this morning."

"This morning?"

"Gorry-me. Rod, what's there in that to get so excited about? Every unmarried man in the county—I wouldn't put it past some of the married ones—will come buzzin' round the red brick house like bees around a honey pot, now that girl is there."

Rodney Gerard thoughtfully regarded a fish hawk sailing high above him. He was looking at a different world from the world he had known as he entered the old barn. The sky seemed bluer, the air more sparkling; his blood raced through his veins. He had the sense of a new beginning, as if again, as in his ardent boyhood, he set his compass by a shining star. Of course he had given to charities—money, not his time. Spending for a round of amusement seemed flat, when you saw a girl taking life in both hands and forcing a living from it. He colored as his glance came back to the quizzical eyes watching him.

"Look here, SI, don't let Miss Schuyler sign up with Calloway. She will listen to you. I'll have a forester here within a month if I have to buy one. I was going to New York tonight—but I'll cut out the social stuff this autumn, stay here and attend to the timber."

Puffer strode after him as he left the barn. "Do you mean to say, Roddy, that you'll winter along with us and get out the logs? Maybe I kin see you doing it?"

The not too thinly veiled taunt sent the blood in a red tide to Gerard's fair hair. He sprang into the low, long roadster, which had not a touch of color to relieve its shining blackness. He slammed the door and jumped the car forward.

"Maybe, Mr. Puffer, you don't know as much about me as you think you do!" he flung over his shoulder.

SI Puffer's faded eyes were warm with affection as he watched the roadster skid round the curve.

"Got him mad, gorry-me, got him mad. Guess I went to work the right way to wake that young feller up." He chuckled, prodded thoughtfully with the straw, before he reflected aloud:

"I wonder, though, how much I really had to do with his stayin'."

Dusk and Mrs. Puffer appeared simultaneously at the red brick house. Prudence was placing a fresh blotter on her brother's desk in the living room when the massive woman waddled in and set a crisp golden brown loaf on the table.

"That's for luck. My grandmother, who was Welsh, always carried along a loaf when she went visiting. She claimed it brought good fortune."

"It smells marvelous! Raisins—hundreds of them! I'm going to eat that crusty end this minute."

"Glad you like it; knew you wouldn't have time to cook today, so left some things in the kitchen for your supper. I wanted to come up and help, but SI said you had everything planned so fine that the moving went as if 'twas on greased wheels. He thinks you're a wonder. Don't know but what I'll get jealous." Her small brown eyes, flecked with green, disappeared in rolls of flesh when she laughed.

Prudence dropped to a floor cushion beside the chair. She swallowed an especially plummy mouthful.

"Jealous! A woman who can make bread like this! You don't have to worry about keeping your men folk off the street. I'll wager they are on time for every meal."

Mrs. Puffer's eyes filled, her lips quivered. "SI is all the men in the family now—we had one boy." She touched a tiny gold star pinned on the breast of her gown. "This stands for a white cross in France."

Prudence laid her hand on the plump fingers. "Dear Mrs. Puffer. I can understand your heartache. I wasn't very old when David went across, but I remember Mother's eyes when the doorbell or the phone rang. They seemed to knife through my heart even when she smiled and talked in her beautiful voice. She had such gay courage."

"Gay courage! That's the sort. Most folks talk of grim courage. I guess that idea came from our Puritan ancestors. But your brother came back safe, dearie. They told me in the village that he wears ten bars on his Victory medal."

"Yes, for carrying ammunition to the Front of the Front in ten campaigns."

"They tell me, too, that isn't all you have to be proud of him for." She resolutely cleared her voice. "We're getting kind of solemn in the firelight. You look real handsome in that dress, it's just the color of the shine in your hair, 'tain't red an' 'tain't yellow, it's like some of my prize zinnias—and those wax beads around your neck are awful pretty."

Wax beads! Julie's pearls! What would Mrs. Puffer say if she knew their value?

"What sort of man is Mr. Calloway, Mrs. Puffer? Something of an exhibitionist, isn't he?"

The stout woman's placidity was slightly shaken. "Dearie, you gave me a start. SI told me I must warn you about Len, and I was thinking how I'd best begin when you up and ask the question. Don't trust him."

Prudence chuckled. Mrs. Puffer's portentous voice was so out of character with her personality.

"Has he always lived here?"

"He was born in this house."

"Here!"

"Lors, Miss Prue, before you've lived here a month you'll think every person in the United States had a relative who was born in this house, or one who died here. Folks is everlastingly stopping to ask if they may look around because someone who belonged to them once lived here."

"Sort of a combination of maternity hospital and detention house for heaven, wasn't it? It is almost dark. Let's have a light." She applied a match to the wick in the lamp on the table. "It's out! I'm clumsy. Wonder why Uncle Austin didn't have electricity put in. There! It's lighted!" She adjusted the green shade.

Oregon's Forests

Names of historic national forest landmarks in Oregon reveal records of human history and migration. Typically historic names are Mount David Douglas, in the Willamette national forest, named in honor of the famous Scottish botanist who, in 1826, first classified the Douglas fir tree for science. Tomahawk Island in Multnomah county marks the vicinity where Captain Clark's pipe tomahawk was stolen by Indians in 1893. Snoqualmie national forest is from the Indian tribal name, "Sdoh-kwalk-bluh," or moon people.

Men Had to Sew

It was considered improper among the ancient Abyssinians for women to wash or sew any article of clothing, these duties being more suitable to men.

SOME HOPE

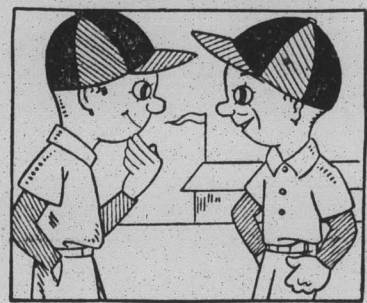

"Do you believe marriage brings sympathy?"
"Most assuredly. I believe every woman feels sorry for some other woman's husband."

BEFORE AND AFTER

"Don't you think people's taste in reading changes?"
"Yes. Before marriage a girl reads Omar Khayyam. After, she reads a cook book."

SILLY QUESTION

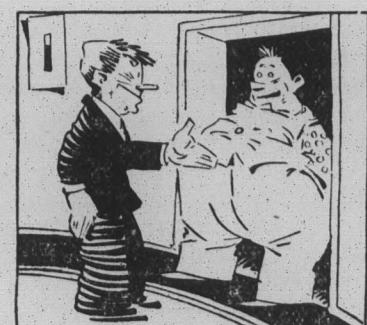

"Where do you suppose baseball umpires go when they die?"
"It depends largely on whether they allow the advice of the bleacherites."

IN FASHION

"You say fintaal has hydrophobia?"
"Yes, he was bitten by a mad dog-fish."

REAL LUCK

"Hello, Dodds! Any luck yesterday when you were fishing?"
"Great! I was away when six bill collectors called."

P'S AND Q'S

"The Smiths are happily married all right."
"What makes you think so?"
"He talks back just enough to keep their arguments interesting."

AND FREE AIR

Shem—What are the folks kicking about, father?
Noah—Some of them want to know if there is a garage with the ark.

For Morning or Afternoon Wear

Pattern 1795

Here's the latest in feminine chic for morning or afternoon wear. Ruffles to accent the smart line of the yoke are irresistibly flattering, and the sleeves have puffed-up charm. A white yoke to top a sprightly silk or cotton print would be ever so lovely. The cost of pattern and fabric is so nominal that you could make this frock without imposing on your budget. A perfect model, too, for the beginner because of its utter simplicity—the front and back are without waistline seams and the yoke is just no trouble at all to set in place. The sleeves may be omitted.

Pattern 1795 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1/4 yards 36-inch fabric and five-eighth yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York.

Some Ideas for Making Taxing Problem Easier

"On every side, gentlemen," said George B. Cautious, at the weekly meeting of the Rowan club, "I hear economic experts declaring that we need to broaden the tax base. What they mean by that, I do not know, and judging from the conversation I have been privileged to have with some of them, I do not feel that they know, either. However, the phrase is one that fills the mouth as well as the ear, and it makes a discussion of the taxing problem rather easy as well as interesting."

"My notion is that we ought to collect our taxes not so much from those who are able to pay them as from the classes that are glad to pay them. Ordinarily we find few citizens who approach the tax-paying window in a cheerful frame of mind. That is because we, in our short-sighted policy have exempted from taxes those very things that would yield us great sums of revenue and from sources that would be glad to help defray the expenses of our local and state governments."

"The question before us, therefore, is how to broaden the tax base and at the same time make all persons happy. Take poll taxes for example. Under our present laws only men pay such taxes, because they were levied long before women had the legal right to vote. After fifty years of age, men pay no such excise. Now then, I would tax women the same as men. They have the same political privileges as men, and would be glad, I am confident, to share in the expense of governmental operations. Not one woman in ten is willing to admit that she is fifty years of age. Therefore the women would go on paying poll taxes until they were sixty or seventy-five, and moreover they would pay them gladly, in order to make it appear that they had not yet reached the half-century mark. There, my friends, is a source of taxation now completely overlooked and which would produce revenue with a smile."

"We have licensed the doctors, architects, automobile drivers, dentists and many others. Why not charge for a poetic license? Now and again we read something in the newspapers in the form of verse, and when we point out that something seems wrong, we are told that the authors have a right to use poetic license. I am here to state that a license fee of $1 on all female poets the motor vehicles of their fathers and mothers. I feel certain that the children would be glad to pay it, and at the same time the experience would by training them for the duties of citizenship. A small license fee on roller skates, kiddie cars, pushbikes, Irish malls, toy express wagons, toy automobiles, toy fire engines, scooters, velocipedes, tricycles and hoops would fetch a surprising amount of new money, and this might be used in lieu of the property taxes that our farmer friends claim are ruinous. — Indianapolis News.

Maya Children Offered as Sacrifices to Gods

A beautiful carved head of jade found at the neck of a little child buried in San Jose, in British Honduras, is regarded by archeologists as evidence of child sacrifice among the Mayas many centuries ago.

The jade head, a treasure so rare that not even Mayan chiefs of San Jose were adorned with anything of the sort, is a clue that the child was no ordinary little Indian. The burial was found by J. Eric Thompson, archeologist of the Field Museum of Natural History, who has just returned from British Honduras. He conducted there a joint expedition with the Carnegie institution of Washington.

The child decked in a rare ceremonial jewel is not the only sign that the Mayas sacrificed children to the gods, found by the expedition. A large number of child burials indicate to the archeologists that the Mayas, like the Aztecs and some of the Indians of the Andes, offered children to the gods hoping to receive the favor of abundant rain.

Hay Fever's Ally

Ragweed hay-fever sufferers may have a new ally in a small beetle, Galerucella integra, which recently has moved northward from its usual range south of Pennsylvania and become a ragweed-eater. A group of them was discovered in a ragweed patch in New York by C. H. Curran, of the American Museum of Natural History. — Literary Digest.

GRIM RELICS OF 'GOOD OLD DAYS'

Penal Settlement Remains Recall Horrors.

Short of hanging, banishment to Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania), was the worst penalty inflicted on offenders a century ago. The six farm laborers of Tolpuddle, sentenced for combining in a trade union, whose centenary was commemorated by the trades union congress this August, were sent there.

Mr. Stanley Unwin, the publisher, and Mr. Severn Storr have visited the remains of this dread penal settlement at Port Arthur in Tasmania's peninsula. Near a peaceful beach, shaded by gigantic gum trees, they state in "Two Young Men See the World," they found the ruins of the village and prison with its exercise yards, pitch-black "silent cell" for prisoners who raved, and long triangular cages.

"Each man was let loose in a cage to himself for an hour or so a day, during which time he could neither speak nor make signs to the man in the next cage to him without earning extra punishment. Here he clanked up and down, up and down, in his heavy irons that tore the skin from his ankles and wrists, more unhappy poor wretch, than the wildest of wild beasts!"

For one man, who had the strength of a gorilla and doubled up ordinary iron bars in his grip, a special cell had been built; for another, a special run and house, because the horrors of the chain gangs had driven him mad and no one dared go near him. It is recorded that sometimes, when two prisoners were confined together, they drew lots to decide who should strangle the other and be hanged for it.

Across the small bay was another building Point Puer, where juvenile prisoners were housed. Adjacent was a steep rock overhanging a lagoon, called "Suicide Cliff," because here the lads used to throw themselves to

EXPERT SUMS UP FORMIDABLE LIST OF EYE DEFECTS

Many a driver who sees clearly, so far as he is aware, and who pays attention to the road still finds driving a car hazardous business. Such a man will be interested in what Dr. Alvah R. Lauer, of Iowa State college, says about the physical shortcomings of apparently normal people.

Clarity of vision is merely one of the qualities of normal eyesight. A secondary quality is width of the field of vision. Normally, a person looking straight ahead detects the presence of a car when it pulls up beside him, but some do not become aware of it until it moves ahead. Extreme sufferers from narrow vision are said to possess tunnel vision, but many persons have less than the normal field of 185 to 195 degrees and do not suspect the fact.

Depth of vision also is necessary to safe driving. This means that the man behind the wheel must not only be able to see a car in the road but must be aware of whether it is traveling with him, standing still, or coming toward him, and approximately how fast. Depth perception is linked with another point, eye dominance. Many people who get headaches when they are tired do so because they are seeing out of only one eye, although they do not know it. Two eyes are needed for three-dimensional sight.

Color blindness is a common and widely recognized fault. Another thing needed for safe driving is strength in the hands for emergency use; there must also be the ability to judge speed of movement, and the right amount of awareness to sudden noise. All these and many other abilities are part of every person's makeup in varying degrees. We recognize them by saying a driver is alert, or capable, observant, quick, cool, but seldom think to discover which particular combinations of perception and nervous control produce these desirable qualities. It goes without saying, however, that a driver who recognizes his deficiencies can take steps to compensate for them. — Detroit Free Press.

Soviet Women Active

The Soviet government wants Russian women to be prepared for war and fitted for work. They are encouraged to compete with men on equal terms in all sports. Women are admitted into the army, in many branches of the service, with no restrictions.

death. Amid the ruins of Port Arthur are the ivy-clad walls of a once beautiful church which one of the convicts designed, buying his freedom for work that is superb even in its ruined state.

Many daring and ghastly attempts at escape were made, but "once the prisoners had contrived to elude their would-be captors and gained the mainland of Tasmania, it meant certain death from starvation in the impenetrable bush, or murder and cannibalism among their own ranks if they were several in their party."

Only a few months before the visit of Mr. Unwin and Mr. Storr, a woodman had made a gruesome discovery on the densely wooded slopes of Mount Arthur—a human skeleton with the broken iron fetters still clinging to arm-bone and leg-bone. Beside it, in a straight row, lay the buttons that had adorned the convict's clothes in "those bygone days of harsh tongue and cruel lash." Evidently, this man had escaped, contrived by almost superhuman efforts to break his fetters, and struggled on until he collapsed and died.

The penitentiary itself was a huge building of two floors where some of the convicts worked.

If a convict rebelled, his irons were made heavier, his meager diet was reduced, his term of solitary confinement prolonged, or he would be put to grind cayenne pepper—the worst task of all. Some convicts became wardens, and these proved the most brutal of all. "We look back in wonder," the two travelers remark, "at the callous inhumanity of those days."

Personal Side of Criticism

Effectiveness Lost When Allowed to Become Matter of Mere Fault Finding; Should Always Be Constructive in Character.

There is one function, that of criticism, which every one feels fully privileged to exercise, both inside the home and out. That this is more than a one-sided affair is too often the case. Bias and prejudice are not attributes of the true critic. The adverse side of criticism is mistaken by many to be the only one, whereas a much more important side is the constructive. A well-rounded view is necessary.

To criticize merely to pull to pieces what some one else has built, or to belittle its importance, is the mark of a small-minded person. Usually such an individual considers there is something fine and superior about this attitude of disdain. By leveling others to his own trifling stature he imagines himself more exalted. Too frequently this is the manner of present day biographers in our literature.

It happens to be true that, to a certain extent, all of us in home or office life are, to the limit of our powers, the personal biographers of those whom we know. By our accounts do those who know them less judge them. It is only necessary to scan the list of one's acquaintances to realize which are the worthy and which the unworthy in exercising this involuntary trust. In some we see discrimination, coupled with kindness, make for a true estimate. In others, prejudice and dislike give as distorted a picture as an imperfect mirror. Since the only aspect is one of wholly false outline, with nothing to be said in its favor, if we ourselves are discriminating critics, we begin to suspect the accuracy of the reflection.

Appreciation, as much as the opposite, is an essential of criticism.

Possibility of Trip to Moon by Rocket Route

The possibility of a voyage in a rocket conveyance propelled by radium which would travel to the moon in 48 hours, 58 seconds, has been set forth in a calculation completed by Prof. Isidore Bay, director of the Astronomical society of Lyons, says a Paris correspondent of the New York Times.

In order for a rocket projectile to leave the sphere of attraction of the earth, Professor Bay explains, it would be necessary to attain a speed of 12,000 meters a second. This could be done by the use of radium, he has estimated, but it would be necessary to increase speed gradually in order that passengers might not be killed by shock.

If the rocket-projectile were comfortably built it would have to weigh two tons, and sufficient radium would be needed to develop 414,000 French horse power. A similar voyage to Venus would take 46 days 20 hours and to Mars 86 days 15 hours.

Impatient Snail

The director of the London Zoo aquarium tells a queer story of a large species of snail. These creatures can live for long periods without food. The snail in question was a specimen in a museum. It was gummed to a label with other specimens, but suddenly decided that such an existence was unsatisfactory, so it broke away from its card and explored the case.

Smith—Because if I didn't let her reign she'd storm.

Mercolized Wax

Keeps Skin Young

Absorb blemishes and discolorations using Mercolized Wax daily as directed. Invisible particles of aged skin are freed and all defects such as blackheads, tan, freckles and large pores disappear. Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.

Powdered Saxolite
Reduces wrinkles and other age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

And how it does increase our building power for good, whether in home or business life, to be under the eye of an appreciative person. If this function of criticism is exercised, together with the adverse side which inevitably occurs, something good is certain to result from the encounter.

Young Men Don't Often Travel Far for Mates

Maybe "distance lends enchantment to the view" of the poet, but the honest laborer is likely to seek his enchantment nearer home, states a contributor to the Des Moines Tribune.

That, at any rate, is the conclusion of a Lehigh university investigator who has completed an interesting survey of the part played in marriage by residential nearness.

His survey covered 570 wedding licenses issued in a Pennsylvania city. He found that the percentage of marriages contracted by sweethearts living more than 20 miles apart increases steadily as one goes up the occupational ladder, from laborer to executive.

The young unskilled laborer generally chose for his bride a girl living within a mile of his own home. Advancing age, as well as growing income, seemed in the majority of cases to be the signal for seeking a helpmeet farther afield.

What great truth is to be drawn from these interesting facts? Is it that the youthful laborer won't walk any farther for his bride than for his favorite brand of cigarette? Or is his trouble merely that he doesn't have a car?

And what role does advancing age play, to broaden the matrimonial horizon as it seems to do? And what becomes, then, of the theory that old men are most susceptible to youthful feminine wiles?

American Tories

St. John, New Brunswick, known as the City of the Loyalists, received more than 10,000 persons who left the United States at the close of the Revolution because they had decided to remain loyal to the British king. On April 16, 1783, 3,000 Loyalists landed in St. John from New York, and Boston.

In the first 3,000 were many hundred residents of Boston who fled from that city to New York and placed themselves under the protection of Sir Guy Carleton, commander of the British forces in the New York area.

Living in New Brunswick now are thousands of descendants of the Boston Loyalists, and there are many in New England who have become American citizens.

Bird Able to Foretell Good and Bad Seasons

Many wild creatures have uncanny ways of forecasting the weather, writes O. G. Pike, the naturalist, in London Tit-Bits. They know to a certainty when a violent change is approaching, and those of us who can read the secrets of the fields are often able to predict coming gales or storms with more certainty than our meteorological office.

One can understand a bird or mammal having a presentiment of a gale or storm which is likely to arrive within a few hours, but what can one think of wild birds that are able to arrange their domestic affairs according to the kind of weather they are going to live through months ahead?

The spotted bower bird of western Australia is able to accomplish this. Her usual clutch of eggs is two, but she varies the number according to the amount of food she will be able to collect for her family when they arrive. If a good season is approaching she will lay three eggs, for instinct tells her that food will be plentiful. If a long drought is on its way, she gives up domestic affairs entirely for that season. If moderate weather is expected, a single egg is laid. The mating season is about six weeks ahead of the actual hatching, so she has to work out her problems well in advance.

Peers' Privilege

A hangman's wages is not one and three-half pence (30 cents). It used to be the sum paid at Tyburn, except in the case of noblemen who were beheaded. They were expected to give the executioner as much as £7 ($35) for chopping off their heads. If a peer were to be hanged today he could claim the privilege of being suspended by a silken cord. — London Tit-Bits.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL EVENTS

Mrs. Carrie Borchardt, much loved and patriotic citizen of Ocean Beach, has moved to Lemon Grove for the winter season.

A baby daughter was born September 7, to Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur D. Treahy, 4926 Santa Monica avenue, at Gracewood hospital.

Frank B. McElwee reports demand for houses a good deal better in Ocean Beach than a year ago; news that we are pleased to hear.

Eastern Star members will please take notice that there will be a regular meeting next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. There will be an initiation.

Miss Bertha Peckham, from Sterling, Illinois, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. B. McElwee at their home, 4408 Brighton avenue. Mrs. McElwee and the visitor are old time friends.

Price B. Heather, carpenter of 1878 Bacon street, has been in the hospital the past week but is expected home again any day now. Mr. Heather's ailment is reported as ulcers of the stomach.

When John Castine, jr., left his house unlocked last Saturday night, as he left to spend the evening away from home he did not expect visitors, however, when he returned he found burglars had been there and stolen two guns, one 45 Colts and one 38 calibre Smith & Wesson revolver, also an Elgin aviator's watch and a ladies wrist watch. The total value was reported at $53.00.

The Ocean Beach Woman's gym class will meet Tuesday, October 2, in the woman's clubhouse. New members urged to be present. No charge for instruction but small collection taken for music. Mrs. H. Bodmer will direct.

Glen Stogsdill, a recent arrival at the Naval Training Station, was a dinner guest Saturday evening at the J. H. Hines home in Ocean Beach. Mrs. Hines and Mr. Stogsdill are natives of the same home town, Tunas, Mo., and had a lot of interesting events to check up on.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Jenkins of Tucson, Arizona, have taken one of the Chas. H. Daly cottages of Cape May avenue and expect to be in Ocean Beach for the coming six months. The Jenkins are the parents of Mrs. T. M. Welch of 4776 Santa Monica avenue and have enjoyed previous visits here.

Roy Gates, postman of route 137 Ocean Beach postoffice, has been critically ill the past week at the San Diego hospital, after an appendicitis operation, following which he contracted pneumonia. Roy's many friends will be pleased to learn that he is now believed to be on the road to recovery, though for a time it was found necessary to help respiration along with treatments from an oxygen tank.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Fryer of St. Anthony, Idaho, arrived in Ocean Beach Friday last, and have taken an apartment at the Silver Spray hotel. When the folks were down last winter Dad Fryer became quite a shuffleboard enthusiast and was a regular attendant at the courts in Palboa park. Mother Fryer is not so anxious for strenuous sport an afternoon of quilting with the "ladies laid" is a real pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edwards of Glendale returned to their home Wednesday, after several days visit with old friends, the Morris Fried family. Tuesday evening Mrs. Fried entertained her guests at Agua Caliente.

Jake Noorda of the Ocean Beach Bakery underwent a tonsillectomy operation at Scripps Memorial hospital in LaJolla Tuesday. Latest reports from the hospital are to the effect that Jake is doing well and will make rapid recovery.

Glen Jones and family of the Sunshine Service Station drove up to the Laguna mountains early Saturday morning; they camped out and about 4 o'clock Sunday morning a terrific rainstorm came up and "soaked" them plenty; so instead of staying there over Sunday, they came home at once to dry out.

A six pound baby girl was born Wednesday morning, Sept. 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hurley of 4944 Santa Monica avenue. It's been fifteen years since anything like this happened in the Hurley family and Jim is strutting around like a bantam rooster. Friends will find free cigars at the Richley Hardware where Jim makes a livelihood.

TAXES

My slender income has been taxed. Also my house and lot;
Tax on all I have invested,
And everything I've got.

Tax on the bread and meat I buy,
On my cheap and simple clothes;
They have even taxed the kerchief,
With which I wipe my nose.

My tooth brush and my comb and soap
Demand a sales tax, too;
I'm really almost taxed to death,
With taxes old and new.

And when the job is finished,
And in death I lay me down,
I wonder, will there be a tax
Upon my harp and crown?

TODAY IS NO TIME FOR PARTY LABELS

Under the above heading Democrats are being called to join the "Merriam Democratic Campaign Committee" to work vigorously anti-Sinclair, from state headquarters in San Francisco.

It appears to us that every avenue of approach possible is being used on the voters to turn them away from Sinclair. First you are asked to work against him because he is not a republican, second because he is termed by some as a "renegade Socialist", third because he is not a regular or "flag" democrat.

The same game is being framed up against President Roosevelt by the old republican guard. Seeds of dissatisfaction with the new deal, being brought out by former president Hoover, the Liberty League, and others who were unable to show us a better way out of our dilemma. Before the next presidential election we shall see a lot of mud being thrown at Mr. Roosevelt.

We trust that in the November election and our next presidential race the American people will be shrewd enough to see the difference between propaganda and truth.

Retired Marine

Answers Final Call

A familiar figure is gone from our streets with the passing of Ed McVey, 5076 Niagara avenue, last Thursday night, September 20. Ed was a retired quartermaster sergeant of Marines and had a pleasant greeting each day we would meet.

He was the husband of May Anderson McVey, Ocean Beach; a brother of Mrs. Henry Osborne, Dunedin, Fla.; and was age 72.

Funeral services were held Monday, September 24, at Bonham Bros chapel under auspices of Ocean Beach Post No. 2415 V.F.W., E. C. Boyce officiating.

McVey had an interesting life. Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, when a young man joined the army service, was then a civilian for a few years and then into government service. He was in the Indian war, later in the Boxer campaign in China, in Mindano, the Philippine islands, and saw 24 to 26 years active Marine service. Spent a number of years at Guam, routed then again to China, and later stationed at Bremerton, Wash.

He crossed the Pacific ten times and twice the Atlantic during his service and was at Vladivostok during the world war. His passing was sudden and attributed to a weak heart.

The following item from the Evening Tribune of a few weeks ago gives a part of McVey's activities as told to Skipper Redgap:

Another "Marylander"
"I was interested in the article in your column concerning the old cruiser Maryland," writes Ed McVey, U.S.M.C., who was one of the marine guard that placed the Maryland in commission at Newport, R. I., April 17, 1905. "I was in the marine guard with Capt. C. C. Carpenter. Capt. R. Ingersoll was the commanding officer of the Maryland. I served on the ship three years, most of the time being captain's orderly, and left Providence, R. I., after President Theodore Roosevelt inspected the fleet at Mulberry Hill; went around the world with the 'Big Four' in 1906-1907, and was transferred to duty in the Philippines when the cruisers arrived there. Let me say she was a great ship, it was a great ship and a great bunch of men from the commanding officers down. Rear Admiral William H. Bronson was in command of the squadron. How many of those old-timers are alive today? I have a match stand that once was a part of the silver service of the ship, presented by the people of Annapolis, which was broken and cast aside. I repaired it, and every time I strike a match on it, my memory goes back to that old ship and the old tune you spoke of, 'Maryland, My Maryland.' Good old days, but only pleasant memories now. I am retired and live at Ocean Beach. If any of the old gang is alive they will remember Ingersoll's orderly, Ed McVey, U.S.M.C."

—IN MEMORIAM—
ACKNOWLEDGMENT
Mysterious, indeed must be
That life beyond, infinity,
To us on earth,
Yet birth exemplified surrounds
And life doth yield to death. Abounds
For us no dearth
Of evidence a circle 'tis
Of which life is the utmost bliss
Yet joineth death:
Annealed each is to make complete
The other, but is life most sweet?
When faltering breath
Doth manifest a nearby flight
Of soul of One beyond death's night
Cannot there be
A recompense of perfect joy
Where naught corrodes?
Love doth accroy
ETERNITY.

LOCAL BANK WILL CONTINUE
PAY 3 PERCENT ON SAVINGS
Although interest rates on savings bank accounts are being reduced October 1, in some sections of California, all branches of the Bank of America will continue to pay 3 percent on the savings accounts of present customers. A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board, announced today. The 3 percent rate also will remain unchanged for new customers depositing not more than $5,000, Giannini announced. Later amounts deposited by new customers on or after October 2, will receive lower rates, the first $5,000 receiving 3 percent, the next $5,000 receiving 2½ percent and amounts above $10,000, 2 percent.
